U.N. Post Offered To Adlai

Soviet Says Dag Helped West To Oust Lumumba

Zorin Blasts U.N. Official

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The Soviet Union Thursday accused Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold of encouraging "a gang of murderers" to carry out cruel and inhuman acts against deposed Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Soviet Delegate Valerian A. Zorin lashed out also at the United States and its NATO allies as the forces behind attempts to physically remove Lumumba and his associates as the legal Congo government.

Zorin delivered the strong attack in the U.N. Security Council in support of a Soviet resolution calling for the immediate liberation of Lumumba, now held prisoner by Congo authorities.

Hammarskjold sat at the side of Zorin, the council president for December, during the speech. This is the normal seating arrangement at the council table.

Dag Smokes Smiles

The secretary - general smoked a cigar, and smiled occasionally as Zorin spoke.

The attack on Hammarskjold ranked in severity with that of Soviet Premier Khrushchev in the General Assembly in September.

"The secretary - general speaks and acts like the colonizers," Zorin declared.

"It is clear that the secretary-general himself does not intend to do anything himself to remedy the situation," Zorin added.

He said the colonizers are plainly in the saddle in the Congo and "Mr. Hammarskjold seems to be washing his hands of the aggression against Mr. Lumumba."

The United States, Argentina, Italy and Britain have introduced a rival resolution directing Hammarskjold to see that rights of all imprisoned Congolese leaders are respected.

Belgium Stands Firm

During the day Belgium put before the council a statement saying it had no intention of withdrawing its personnel from the Congo as demanded by the Soviet Union.

"Belgium cannot be prevented from helping restore prosperity in the Congo in the manner desired by the Congolese authorities," the statement said. Meanwhile, Congo President Joseph Kasavubu, in a cable to Hammarskjold, criticized the United Nations for being agitated over the fate of Lumumba. Kasavubu asserted Lumumbas' activities "are at the root of the tragedy which we are witnessing."

Kasavubu asserted Lumumba is in a satisfactory state of health. He urged Hammarskjold to request U.N. members to halt all tervention on behalf of Lumumba, saying his case is a domestic matter for the Congo government to handle.

Hospital's Twin Record Broken

BALTIMORE (AP)—Nurses at University Hospital are not only seeing double—they're doing double duty these days.

During a 12-hour period, between 11:01 a.m. Tuesday and 12:16 a.m. Wednesday, four sets of twins were born, a record for the hospital in such a short span.

The babies weighed between 2 pounds, 14½ ounces and 7 pounds 6 ounces. There were two sets of twin boys, one set of twin girls and one boy-girl combination.

Fewer White Students Pass Picket Lines

NEW ORLEANS, La., (AP)—Hard-working neighborhood pickets Thursday whittled down still more the number of white children attending the William Frantz School.

In contrast to Wednesday's 19 and the 23 Monday, only 14 white pupils entered the building.

"It's obvious that someone is getting to the parents at night," said one school official privately.

Demonstrators near the school—still restrained by police barricades a block away—also dwindled in size. Few braved the cool air to watch the white children arrive.

As usual, federal marshals accompanied the one Negro girl who attends the first grade at Frantz, arrive.

The boycott remained solid at McDonogh No. 19, the other public elementary school integrated by federal court order Nov. 14.

The three Negro girls in the first grade were the only children to attend McDonogh classes.

Bomb Shatters Car, Killing N.Y. Truck Checker

NEW YORK (UPI) — A mysterious bombing—the second of its kind within 24 hours in the Metropolitan area — killed a young trucking company employe Thursday as he switched on the ignition of his car outside his Forest Hills luxury apartment.

The victim was Kenneth Feinberg, 26, a checker for the Fox Trucking Co. in Manhattan and son of a wealthy downtown furrier.

Police were at a loss for a motive in the case although they said the young man was known to have had friends "who were not exactly upright, law - abiding citizens."

They also did not dismiss the possibility the bomb planted in the Feinberg auto actually was meant for the father, Hyman Feinberg, in whose name the car was registered.

Young Feinberg's death set off an intensive search for possible gangland or labor ties, including any links with a similar auto bombing unsuccessfully aimed at a New Jersey business executive in Elizabeth Wednesday.

The New Jersey executive, William P. Hillbrant, 62, treasurer of the Neo-Gravure Printing Co. of Weehawken, N.J., had given testimony in Federal Court last summer that helped send to prison Teamster union official Harold (The Weasel) Gross.

Gold Sold To U. S. By Monetray Fund

WASHINGTON (AP)—The International Monetary Fund has sold the United States $300 million of gold, boosting the American bullion holding for the first time in many months.

The IMF said it made the transaction in order to obtain dollars to invest in short-term Treasury securities. It said it wanted to convert some of its gold into Treasury IOU's in order to earn interest on part of its reserves.

Since June 30, foreign nations have purchased about $1.4 billion of American gold which has given rise to some fears that a "run" on gold might develop. The foreign purchases cut the U.S. gold supply to $17,882,000,000 as of last Monday.

Kennedy Attire To Follow Inauguration Tradition

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy will be resplendent in traditional silk top hat and cutaway coat at his inauguration Jan. 20.

His tailor, Samuel Harris, let the hat out of the bag Thursday, but conceded that Kennedy has not surrendered entirely to the sartorial rules of formal wear.

Instead of the strictly formal Ascot tie, the president-elect held out for a four-in-hand. Although he'll have the required gray gloves to match his waistcoat, Harris doubts Kennedy will even carry them.

The president-elect told Harris—who's been the Kennedy family's tailor for the past 12 years—that he was not planning to cover his inaugural attire with a topcoat "unless the weather is so cold I absolutely have to."

Harris reported he measured Kennedy's 6-foot-2 frame (40-inch chest, 33-inch waistline) at a New York hotel Tuesday.

He was fitted for an Oxford gray lambswool cutaway, ligh. pearl gray vest, medium worsted gray striped trousers and a white semi-dress shirt with French cuffs. With this goes that silk top hat.

President Eisenhower broke silk hat tradition by selecting a Homburg, a stroller jacket and four-in-hand tie for his inauguration.

Laos Capital Taken Over By Military

Loyal Army Units Sack Commander As Pro-Reds Flee

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Military units vowing loyalty to neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma took over Vientiane Thursday and pro-Communist elements fled or were placed under guard. Capt. Kong Le, who leans toward the left, was sacked as garrison commander.

The predawn maneuver appeared aimed at the pro-Communist Pathet Lao and other leftists who have infiltrated the capital. Rumors had swept the city that Pathet Lao guerrillas nearby might try to seize Vientiane.

Some Western diplomats said the military maneuver might be designed to strengthen the premier's hand in his peace negotiations with the rightist regime of Gen. Phoumi Nosavan. Phoumi's forces have broken through on the jungle front 100 miles to the east and are reported advancing on the capital.

Conflicting Reports

In his southern headquarters at Savannakhet, however, Phoumi asserted forces loyal to him had staged the uprising, that it is directed against Souvanna, and his forces expected to have complete control of the capital soon.

Radio Savannakhet, voice of Phoumi's regime, was heard broadcasting a report claiming the garrison had overthrown Souvanna.

But Vientiane radio broadcasts, leaflets from the garrison leaders pledging loyalty to Souvanna, and the premier himself indicated that the government and garrison were working in harmony.

Paratroop Puzzle

There was one puzzling development in the afternoon, however, after the rightist broadcast. Souvanna said two planeloads of rightist paratroopers flew over Vientiane and asked permission to land.

When this was denied, he said, the planes flew to Thanalaeng and dropped 70 paratroopers near that town 14 miles from Vientiane. They made no attempt to get in touch with his soldiers there but he said he doubted they planned to attack.

Palace sources expressed hopeful belief the paratroops had come to help Souvanna's forces defend the capital from the Pathet Lao.

U.S. To Retain Trinidad Base

CROWN POINT, Tobago (AP)—The United States will retain its naval base at Chaguaramas on the island of Trinidad for 17 years, it was agreed at talks ending here Thursday.

The base is one of those Britain leased to the United States in the deal that delivered 50 old U.S. destroyers to the British early in World War II. Renegotiation was brought on by the new autonomous status of the former British West Indies colonies.

Chaguaramas is the only active U.S. naval base in the south Caribbean.

Under a new agreement covering Trinidad and Tobago, however, the United States will abandon some 21,000 acres leased under the 1941 U.S.-British treaty arranged by Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill.

A communique said the areas retained by the United States for 17 years would enable the U.S. naval station at Chaguaramas to carry out "important defense and electronic research missions."

Ailing Khrushchev Reported Improved

MOSCOW (AP) — Anastas I. Mikoyan, Soviet first deputy premier, told Western newsmen Thursday Premier Khrushchev is feeling better but remains confined to his home with influenza.

Khrushchev was well enough to have a bedside visit with Field Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer, vice president of the United Arab Republic, who is touring the Soviet Union.

They discussed expansion of friendly relations and economic cooperation, the Tass news agency said.

De Gaulle Visit May Signal New Algeria Rioting

ALGIERS (AP) — Algeria's right-wing European settlers ignored official warnings of a crackdown on rioters and went ahead with plans for a general strike to coincide with President Charles de Gaulle's arrival Friday.

Officials admit the tension in Algeria has reached such a point that it could mushroom into mob violence.

While peaceful street demonstrations were not specifically banned, the government warned storekeepers any shop which shut down could be seized for upto 30 days. They told grocers to consider themselves requisitioned by the army and to stay open as usual or suffer military discipline.

Six thousand gendarmes and riot police were in and around Algiers, ready to move in if trouble develops.

The official reaction came after the powerful Front for French Algeria (FAF), strongest of the right - wing organizations and which claims half a million members, ordered its adherents throughout the territory to stage the general strike. Tracts calling for the strike denounced De Gaulle's policies for self-determination as an abandonment of Algeria.

The FAF called for its followers to take to the streets "without arms" for peaceful protests. There seeemed small likelihood in Algeria's tinderbox atmosphere that serious clashes with the police could be avoided if the Europeans poured into the streets as they have so often in the past.

Extremist right wing commando squads were reported grouping and ready to use force in their desperate opposition to De Gaulle's plans for Algerian autonomy.

35 Reported Killed In Katanga Battle

ELISABETHVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Rebel tribesmen and Katanga provincial police clashed in northern Katanga Province Wednesday, leaving at least 35 dead, reports reaching Elisabethville said Thursday.

The Katanga government listed 30 rebels killed and scores wounded. Other reports said five Katanga police were slain and four wounded.

The fighting broke out near the town of Kongolo, a trouble spot long harassed by Baluba tribesmen hostile to the secessionist regime of President Moise Tshombe of Katanga Province.

Canada's Royal Bank Sells Assets To Cuba

MONTREAL (AP)—The Royal Bank of Canada announced Thursday its Cuban assets have been sold to Banco Nacional de Cuba, the central bank of Cuba.

The announcement from the Royal Bank's head office here followed announcement in Havana that the bank had been nationalized by Fidel Castro's government.

The bank had 23 branches and more than $125 million in assets in Cuba.

$400 In $2 Bills Stolen From Safe

BALTIMORE (AP)—Some people think $2 bills are unlucky.

Maybe Sidney Katz is convinced now, too.

The 33-year-old owner of an East Baltimore variety store told police Thursday his collection of $2 bills, totaling $400, was taken from a safe in his store.

Katz said he had been collecting the $2 bills for years.

Invaders Fight Castro Troops, Reports Claim

HAVANA (AP)—Armed invaders were reported Thursday to have landed on Cubas' north coast near the town of Carralillo Tuesday and engaged government troops and militiamen in a furious battle.

There was no confirmation of the reports but anti-Castro sources insisted they were correct.

Earlier the government claimed it had destroyed a band of insurgents in a battle at Cabanas only 32 miles west of Havana. Corralillo is a few miles east of the Matanzas-Las Villa border to the east of Havana.

Rumors of fighting in the Corralillo area about 100 miles east of Havana have been current for the past two days. There was no indication of the strength of the reported invaders.

Some claimed to have seen truckloads of heavily armed government militiamen diverted toward Corralillo while en route to the Escambray Mountains in the southern Las Villas province.

Military authorities were still turning back civilians and foreigners trying to visit the hilly areas of Pinar Del Rio province where Castro forces reported they had cleaned up a pocket of resistance and captured a defecting Cuban army officer.

Other unconfirmed but widely heard reports said a bomb exploded Sunday in the control room of the expropriated Shell Oil Co. refinery, causing heavy damage.

The reports said the explosion put the control room out of operation, forcing refinery workers to resort to manual operations.

Two Changes In Income Tax Process Loom

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government is working on two major changes in federal income tax procedures. If both innovations are adopted, millions of people will be affected and many will pay less taxes.

One change is definitely in the works. The Internal Revenue Service will announce shortly a new tax form to be used by certain taxpayers who itemize their medical deductions. This form will be used by those 65 or older or who support parents in that age group.

The new form stems from a 1960 law which, for the first time, allows bigger deductions for those who pay the medical bills of dependent parents.

The second change still is under consideration. Revenue people are debating whether to issue special tables telling how much may reasonably be deducted on federal tax returns for paying state sales taxes.

This is a problem that has long troubled many taxpayers who itemize deductions but don't keep accurate records of sales tax payments. They often underestimate their payments and in such cases, would lessen their taxes by following the proposed tables.

If the idea is adopted, tables will be issued for each of the 34 states, plus the District of Columbia, which levy sales taxes. The tables would list varying amounts arranged according to different income groups and family sizes. They could not be used to estimate local sales taxes which also are deductible on federal returns.

The new medical deduction form —No. 2948—will cover both sides of a single sheet. Those using this form will file it in addition to their regular tax return. It will cover only medical items.

The IRS is printing five million copies of the new form and will distribute them to all its field offices by Dec. 20.

Most taxpayers may deduct only those medical expenses which exceed 3 per cent of their adjusted gross income. However, in a case where either husband or wife is 65 or older, the 3 per cent rule is waived for both.

Electrical Firms Plead Guilty In Antitrust Case

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The federal government Thursday wrapped up one of its biggest criminal antitrust cases as America's largest electrical manufacturers, accused of price-fixing and bid-rigging, changed innocent pleas to guilty of some charges and no defense to others.

The indictments, initiated last February, involved annual sales of heavy electrical equipment—mainly to local, state and federal agencies and public utilities—of about $2 billion.

Only one individual defendant pleaded innocent. Charges against another were dropped.

All told, 19 firms—represented by their attorneys before U.S. Dist. Judge J. Cullen Ganey—entered guilty pleas to one or more of 20 indictments handed up by four different federal grand juries.

Fourteen of the 19 companies also pleaded nolo contendere—no defense—to some charges. Ten other firms cited in the price conspiracy pleaded no defense only.

Of the 46 individuals indicted, 35 entered guilty pleas. Nine others pleaded nolo.

Counting both companies and individuals, there were 72 guilty pleas and 88 of no defense.

Judge Ganey indicated that he regards a guilty and nolo plea as similar. He deferred sentencing until early next year.

The nation's two biggest electrical makers—Westinghouse Electric Corp. and General Electric Co.—each were named in 19 indictments.

Westinghouse pleaded guilty to seven counts, GE to six, and no defense to the others.

Stevenson To Consider Envoy Job

Kennedy Will Ask Congress Create Urban Affairs Dept.

WASHINGTON (AP) —President-elect John F. Kennedy Thursday asked Adlai E. Stevenson to serve as ambassador to the United Nations. Stevenson said he would consider it.

Kennedy met with Stevenson after conferring at his Georgetown home with Dean Rusk, who has been described as a leading contender for the top Cabinet post of secretary of state.

Rusk declined to tell newsmen whether he and Kennedy had discussed a possible role for him in the new administration. They were together about 45 minutes. Rusk said the talk dealt with foreign affairs generally and especially "organization of the government to carry out our foreign policy."

Rusk, a 51-year-old Democrat who served as assistant secretary of state in the Truman administration, is now head of the Rockefeller Foundation with headquarters in New York.

Kennedys' announcement that he was offering the U.N. role to Stevenson ended speculation about the 1952-56 Democratic standard-bearer.

Kennedy still has seven regular Cabinet posts to fill. He has so far named Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina to be secretary of commerce, Gov. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut to be secretary of health, education and welfare and Rep. Stewart L. Udall of Arizona to be secretary of the interior.

White Offered Job

Much speculation now centers on the posts of secretary of the treasury, secretary of defense and attorney general.

One of those mentioned for attorney general, or for solicitor general, attorney Byron (Whizzer) White of Denver, was a Kennedy caller Thursday. He said Kennedy offered him a job—he didnt' say what job—and said he was thinking it over.

Robert F. Kennedy, the president-elect's brother and campaign manager, remains in the attorney general picture.

Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr. was reported to have been asked by a group of foreign students about reports that Kennedy might retain him, even though he is a Republican. Gates was said to have replied he had not been spoken to about the matter.

Douglas Dillon, undersecretary of state in the Eisenhower administration, and Robert S. McNamara, president of the Ford Motor Co., continue to be mentioned as possibilities for secretary of the treasury.

Adlai "Wants To Help"

Stevenson withheld a public decision, saying he wanted to talk it over further. He emphasized, however, that "I have tried to make it clear that I want to help."

Kennedy called the assignment one of the three or four most important jobs in the administration and said: "I can think of no man who would fill this post with greater distinction."

In one major announcement, Kennedy said he will ask Congress to create a Cabinet Department of Urban Affairs, to handle problems peculiar to city dwellers.

Kennedy told newsmen of his plans to ask for the long-discussed new Cabinet department after a conference with Gov. David Lawrence of Pennsylvania.

Kennedy said it was much too early to talk about who might head such an agency.

The question of a secretary of the proposed department was not discussed with Lawrence, Kennedy said, nor was the position of secretary of labor. Lawrence told newsmen his principal mission was to discuss federal aid for economically depressed areas, such as parts of Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

During a series of conferences at his Georgetown home, Kennedy also reviewed unemployment with Reps. Charles A. Buckley and Eugene J. Keogh, New York Democrats, and offered government jobs to two lawyers.

Bomb Shatters Car, Killing N.Y. Truck Checker

NEW YORK (UPI) — A mysterious bombing—the second of its kind within 24 hours in the Metropolitan area — killed a young trucking company employe Thursday as he switched on the ignition of his car outside his Forest Hills luxury apartment.

The victim was Kenneth Feinberg, 26, a checker for the Fox Trucking Co. in Manhattan and son of a wealthy downtown furrier.

Police were at a loss for a motive in the case although they said the young man was known to have had friends "who were not exactly upright, law - abiding citizens."

They also did not dismiss the possibility the bomb planted in the Feinberg auto actually was meant for the father, Hyman Feinberg, in whose name the car was registered.

Young Feinberg's death set off an intensive search for possible gangland or labor ties, including any links with a similar auto bombing unsuccessfully aimed at a New Jersey business executive in Elizabeth Wednesday.

The New Jersey executive, William P. Hillbrant, 62, treasurer of the Neo-Gravure Printing Co. of Weehawken, N.J., had given testimony in Federal Court last summer that helped send to prison Teamster union official Harold (The Weasel) Gross.

U.S. To Retain Trinidad Base

CROWN POINT, Tobago (AP)—The United States will retain its naval base at Chaguaramas on the island of Trinidad for 17 years, it was agreed at talks ending here Thursday.

The base is one of those Britain leased to the United States in the deal that delivered 50 old U.S. destroyers to the British early in World War II. Renegotiation was brought on by the new autonomous status of the former British West Indies colonies.

Chaguaramas is the only active U.S. naval base in the south Caribbean.

Under a new agreement covering Trinidad and Tobago, however, the United States will abandon some 21,000 acres leased under the 1941 U.S.-British treaty arranged by Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill.

A communique said the areas retained by the United States for 17 years would enable the U.S. naval station at Chaguaramas to carry out "important defense and electronic research missions."

Ailing Khrushchev Reported Improved

MOSCOW (AP) — Anastas I. Mikoyan, Soviet first deputy premier, told Western newsmen Thursday Premier Khrushchev is feeling better but remains confined to his home with influenza.

Khrushchev was well enough to have a bedside visit with Field Marshal Abdel Hakim Amer, vice president of the United Arab Republic, who is touring the Soviet Union.

They discussed expansion of friendly relations and economic cooperation, the Tass news agency said.

De Gaulle Visit May Signal New Algeria Rioting

ALGIERS (AP) — Algeria's right-wing European settlers ignored official warnings of a crackdown on rioters and went ahead with plans for a general strike to coincide with President Charles de Gaulle's arrival Friday.

Officials admit the tension in Algeria has reached such a point that it could mushroom into mob violence.

While peaceful street demonstrations were not specifically banned, the government warned storekeepers any shop which shut down could be seized for upto 30 days. They told grocers to consider themselves requisitioned by the army and to stay open as usual or suffer military discipline.

Six thousand gendarmes and riot police were in and around Algiers, ready to move in if trouble develops.

The official reaction came after the powerful Front for French Algeria (FAF), strongest of the right - wing organizations and which claims half a million memners, ordered its adherents throughout the territory to stage the general strike. Tracts calling for the strike denounced De Gaulle's policies for self-determination as an abandonment of Algeria.

The FAF called for its followers to take to the streets "without arms" for peaceful protests. There seeemed small likelihood in Algeria's tinderbox atmosphere that serious clashes with the police could be avoided if the Europeans poured into the streets as they have so often in the past.

Extremist right wing commando squads were reported grouping and ready to use force in their desperate opposition to De Gaulle's plans for Algerian autonomy.

35 Reported Killed In Katanga Battle

ELISABETHVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Rebel tribesmen and Katanga provincial police clashed in northern Katanga Province Wednesday, leaving at least 35 dead, reports reaching Elisabethville said Thursday.

The Katanga government listed 30 rebels killed and scores wounded. Other reports said five Katanga police were slain and four wounded.

The fighting broke out near the town of Kongolo, a trouble spot long harassed by Baluba tribesmen hostile to the secessionist regime of President Moise Tshombe of Katanga Province.

Canada's Royal Bank Sells Assets To Cuba

MONTREAL (AP)—The Royal Bank of Canada announced Thursday its Cuban assets have been sold to Banco Nacional de Cuba, the central bank of Cuba.

The announcement from the Royal Bank's head office here followed announcement in Havana that the bank had been nationalized by Fidel Castro's government.

The bank had 23 branches and more than $125 million in assets in Cuba.

$400 In $2 Bills Stolen From Safe

BALTIMORE (AP)—Some people think $2 bills are unlucky.

Maybe Sidney Katz is convinced now, too.

The 33-year-old owner of an East Baltimore variety store told police Thursday his collection of $2 bills, totaling $400, was taken from a safe in his store.

Katz said he had been collecting the $2 bills for years.

Invaders Fight Castro Troops, Reports Claim

HAVANA (AP)—Armed invaders were reported Thursday to have landed on Cubas' north coast near the town of Carralillo Tuesday and engaged government troops and militiamen in a furious battle.

There was no confirmation of the reports but anti-Castro sources insisted they were correct.

Earlier the government claimed it had destroyed a band of insurgents in a battle at Cabanas only 32 miles west of Havana. Corralillo is a few miles east of the Matanzas-Las Villa border to the east of Havana.

Rumors of fighting in the Corralillo area about 100 miles east of Havana have been current for the past two days. There was no indication of the strength of the reported invaders.

Some claimed to have seen truckloads of heavily armed government militiamen diverted toward Corralillo while en route to the Escambray Mountains in the southern Las Villas province.

Military authorities were still turning back civilians and foreigners trying to visit the hilly areas of Pinar Del Rio province where Castro forces reported they had cleaned up a pocket of resistance and captured a defecting Cuban army officer.

Other unconfirmed but widely heard reports said a bomb exploded Sunday in the control room of the expropriated Shell Oil Co. refinery, causing heavy damage.

The reports said the explosion put the control room out of operation, forcing refinery workers to resort to manual operations.

Two Changes In Income Tax Process Loom

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government is working on two major changes in federal income tax procedures. If both innovations are adopted, millions of people will be affected and many will pay less taxes.

One change is definitely in the works. The Internal Revenue Service will announce shortly a new tax form to be used by certain taxpayers who itemize their medical deductions. This form will be used by those 65 or older or who support parents in that age group.

The new form stems from a 1960 law which, for the first time, allows bigger deductions for those who pay the medical bills of dependent parents.

The second change still is under consideration. Revenue people are debating whether to issue special tables telling how much may reasonably be deducted on federal tax returns for paying state sales taxes.

This is a problem that has long troubled many taxpayers who itemize deductions but don't keep accurate records of sales tax payments. They often underestimate their payments and in such cases, would lessen their taxes by following the proposed tables.

If the idea is adopted, tables will be issued for each of the 34 states, plus the District of Columbia, which levy sales taxes. The tables would list varying amounts arranged according to different income groups and family sizes. They could not be used to estimate local sales taxes which also are deductible on federal returns.

The new medical deduction form —No. 2948—will cover both sides of a single sheet. Those using this form will file it in addition to their regular tax return. It will cover only medical items.

The IRS is printing five million copies of the new form and will distribute them to all its field offices by Dec. 20.

Most taxpayers may deduct only those medical expenses which exceed 3 per cent of their adjusted gross income. However, in a case where either husband or wife is 65 or older, the 3 per cent rule is waived for both.

Gold Sold To U. S. By Monetray Fund

WASHINGTON (AP)—The International Monetary Fund has sold the United States $300 million of gold, boosting the American bullion holding for the first time in many months.

The IMF said it made the transaction in order to obtain dollars to invest in short-term Treasury securities. It said it wanted to convert some of its gold into Treasury IOU's in order to earn interest on part of its reserves.

Since June 30, foreign nations have purchased about $1.4 billion of American gold which has given rise to some fears that a "run" on gold might develop. The foreign purchases cut the U.S. gold supply to $17,882,000,000 as of last Monday.

Kennedy Attire To Follow Inauguration Tradition

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect John F. Kennedy will be resplendent in traditional silk top hat and cutaway coat at his inauguration Jan. 20.

His tailor, Samuel Harris, let the hat out of the bag Thursday, but conceded that Kennedy has not surrendered entirely to the sartorial rules of formal wear.

Instead of the strictly formal Ascot tie, the president-elect held out for a four-in-hand. Although he'll have the required gray gloves to match his waistcoat, Harris doubts Kennedy will even carry them.

The president-elect told Harris—who's been the Kennedy family's tailor for the past 12 years—that he was not planning to cover his inaugural attire with a topcoat "unless the weather is so cold I absolutely have to."

Harris reported he measured Kennedy's 6-foot-2 frame (40-inch chest, 33-inch waistline) at a New York hotel Tuesday.

He was fitted for an Oxford gray lambswool cutaway, ligh. pearl gray vest, medium worsted gray striped trousers and a white semi-dress shirt with French cuffs. With this goes that silk top hat.

President Eisenhower broke silk hat tradition by selecting a Homburg, a stroller jacket and four-in-hand tie for his inauguration.

Electrical Firms Plead Guilty In Antitrust Case

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The federal government Thursday wrapped up one of its biggest criminal antitrust cases as America's largest electrical manufacturers, accused of price-fixing and bid-rigging, changed innocent pleas to guilty of some charges and no defense to others.

The indictments, initiated last February, involved annual sales of heavy electrical equipment—mainly to local, state and federal agencies and public utilities—of about $2 billion.

Only one individual defendant pleaded innocent. Charges against another were dropped.

All told, 19 firms—represented by their attorneys before U.S. Dist. Judge J. Cullen Ganey—entered guilty pleas to one or more of 20 indictments handed up by four different federal grand juries.

Fourteen of the 19 companies also pleaded nolo contendere—no defense—to some charges. Ten other firms cited in the price conspiracy pleaded no defense only.

Of the 46 individuals indicted, 35 entered guilty pleas. Nine others pleaded nolo.

Counting both companies and individuals, there were 72 guilty pleas and 88 of no defense.

Judge Ganey indicated that he regards a guilty and nolo plea as similar. He deferred sentencing until early next year.

The nation's two biggest electrical makers—Westinghouse Electric Corp. and General Electric Co.—each were named in 19 indictments.

End Of Church Denominational Barriers Urged

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—An appeal to the churches to break through the walls of denominationalism was issued Thursday by the National Council of Churches. They were urged to work for "full unity, visible and invisible, of the people of God."

"A divided church cannot proclaim convincingly a gospel of reconciling love," declared a key message adopted by the council's triennial general assembly.

It called denominational barriers a sin, saying: "Not the churches' diversity but their separation from one another is the heart of this sinfulness."

The assembly, representing most of the nation's major Protestant and Orthodox churches, urged these steps in efforts to achieve full unity:

1. Further development of "corporate and common ministeries" serving all churches.

2. Recognition that interdenominational councils, on local or other levels, "partake of the nature of the church."

3. Acknowledgement by each denomination of "the authenticity of Christian discipleship in all the others" and a willingness to trust them in caring for human souls.

4. Action by all churches in each community to "live and act together as one church in one place."

"Every congregation needs to recognize itself first of all as a part of Christ's universal church and only thereafter as a representative of a particular historic tradition," the pronouncement said.

Action on it came just before the assembly elected as president J. Irwin Miller, a scholarly Indiana business man and a leading lay figure in the Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ).

He will be the first layman to hold the post. It is the highest office in American interdenominational affairs.

The message, the main pronouncement of the week-long assembly representing 33 denominations with 40 million members, applauded the growing ecumenical movement for Christian unity.

Report Prison Site Selected

BALTIMORE (AP)—The State Board of Correction is expected to name a Washington County site Monday for a new $10 million medium security prison.

The Baltimore Sun said in a Friday morning story that the state administration was reported to have decided to locate the new institution on the farm occupied by the Reformatory for Males near Hagerstown. It said formal action will come Monday.

The story said reliable reports indicated the deciding voice was raised by Gov. Tawes on grounds construction on the new prison was preferable to further delay in meeting critical prison needs.

Washington County representatives have requested the new prison be built at the Hagerstown site, but some correctional authorities objected to location of two prisons so close together.

The new institution is expected to accommodate 1,000 candidates for an intensive rehabilitation program.

He and Keogh also discussed New York state political situation with Kennedy, Buckley said, but he declined to go into details.

China Shop Owner Guilty Of Violating Sunday Law

ELLICOTT CITY, Md. (AP) — The owner of an Elkridge china shop and his clerk were found guilty Thursday of violating Maryland's Sunday closing law, better known as blue laws.

A Howard County Circuit Court jury delibreated nearly two hours before returning the verdict against Harry C. Colwell, owner of the Colonial China Shop, and Mary A. Merson, a clerk.

Judge James Macgill deferred sentencing pending a motion for a new trial in the test case of the state's blue laws. The statute provides a maximum fine of $50.

The defendants were charged with selling a $1.50 vase on Sunday, Nov. 6.

Defense attorney Charles Hogg had presented a yellowed, musty law book containing Maryland's 1723 law on "Sabbath Breaking."

"This is the Twentieth Century," Hogg said as he argued that the roots of this case predate the American Revolution and the Constitution.

Hogg quoted from the Act of 1723 which provided punishment for "blasphemers, swearers, drunkards, and Sabbath breakers." The penalty was payment of 200 pounds of tobacco.

"But is there much difference between blasphemy and this charge?" he asked.

State's Atty. T. Hunt Mayfield told the jury that, "if we don't like these laws, let's change them." He said the only question in this case is the law.

The Supreme Court of the United States is currently hearing arguments in several cases contesting Sunday sales laws in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts.

State Sunday Laws Defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of three states told the Supreme Court Thursday there is nothing unconstitutional about laws which prohibit or restrict commercial activities on Sunday.

Spokesmen for Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Maryland all denied their Sunday closing or blue laws are aimed at enforcing a mandatory day of worship.

Opponents of the laws generally contended during two days of debate before the high court that they create severe hardships for orthodox Jews and others who observe a day other than Sunday as a Sabbath.

Similar attacks on laws of Maryland and Pennsylvania stem from activities of Two Guys from Harrison-Allentown, Inc., a discount firm operating in both states.

In the Maryland case, seven employes of the firm were convicted of selling general merchandise on Sunday in Glen Burnie, Md.

Attorney Harry Silbert, representing the seven, attacked the Maryland law permitting Sunday sales of various merchandise at Maryland beaches while prohibiting the same sales at a store not at a beach location.

Judge Charges Negroes Seek Special Privileges

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) —Washington State Supreme Court Judge Joseph A. Mallery accuses the Negro race of trying to deprive whites of the right to choose their associates in private affairs.

The 64-year-old veteran jurist also said he had been the victim of retaliation by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People over his position in a previous case involving racial discrimination.

Judge Mallery wrote in an opinion Thursday involving a cemetery's refusal to permit burial of a Negro child in a restricted section:

"The Negro race, ably led by the NCAAP, makes the result of every Negro lawsuit the measure of its success in securing not only rights equal to whites in public affairs, but also of special privileges for Negroes in private affairs.

"This explains why the NAACP administers massive retaliation upon judges for opinions that do not advance the Negro cause."

The judge said the NAACP had actively opposed him in his recent successful bid for re-election to a fourth 6-year term.

In New York, a spokesman for the NAACP denied that the organization had attempted to retaliate against any judge.

The spokesman said Mallery's remarks "represent a misinterpretation and a willful misunderstanding" of the NAACP's work for constitutional rights.

He went on to say in a special opinion concurring with the majority in the cemetery case:

"This lawsuit is but an incident, the second of a series, in the overall Negro crusade to judicially deprive white people of their right to choose their associates in their private affairs."

The State Supreme Court ruled in a 6-3 opinion that the state law barring racial discrimination by cemeteries was unconstitutional because of a technicality.

The court held that the law violated a part of the state constitution which limits any bill by the legislature to a single subject which must be expressed in the title.

New Satellite Gathers Data On Radiation

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — Discoverer XVIII whizzed around the earth every 94 minutes Thursday, carrying a releasable capsule which was drinking up valuable information for future human space travelers.

The Air Force had contemplated releasing the 300-pound capsule for a recovery attempt Thursday afternoon but delayed the maneuver because the satellite continued so effectively in orbit. The longer the capsule remains in orbit, the more valuable information it picks up, scientists said.

The capsule contained samples of human and plant life and if recovered will give information on prolonged effects of radiation in the upper atmosphere.

An Air Force statement said, "the time of recovery will be determined by the performance of the vehicle. A three-day orbit is under consideration."

The satellite was launched into orbit from the Pacific coast base Wednesday afternoon.

Top speed of a race horse is estimated at 48 miles an hour.

Court Raps FPC Failure To Hold Down Gas Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals Thursday criticized the Federal Power Commission for what it said was failure to adequately hold down prices of natural gas.

The court said the public interest, "in the context of a rising natural gas market, demands a real administrative effort to hold back prices."

Reversing a commission certification of initial price proposals of several gas producers in southern Louisiana fields, the court said:

"We find nothing in the record before us which would justify the conclusion that the commission has adequately performed this duty" on holding prices.

In a second natural gas case, the court also reversed a commission order saying:

"Insofar as the order purports to pass favorably on the prospects of gas lease acquisitions, it is unsupported by substantial evidence in the record, and cannot stand."

Both opinions by Judge George T. Washington cited a 1959 Supreme Court decision in a natural gas case. The judge said the Supreme Court decision "reaffirmed the intention of Congress that natural gas should be sold at the lowest possible, reasonable rate consistent with the maintenance of adequate service in the public service.

Washington added:

"We believe the Supreme Court meant to impress upon the commission an interpretation of the public interest which. . .demands a real administrative effort to hold back prices."

Both Court of Appeals decisions were given on appeals by the New York State Public Service Commission, which has sought to hold down natural gas prices.

One case involved commission authorizations for the Texas Gas Transmission Corp., of Owensboro, Ky., and the Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. of Shreveport, La., to build lines to supply 100 million cubic feet of gas daily for Hope Natural Gas Co., of Clarksburg, W. Va. Hope sells gas to utilities in New York and other states. The litigation arose over the price Hope was to pay for gas in the field.

Antique Dealer Gets 10 Days

BALTIMORE (AP) — Federal Judge Roszel C. Thomsen Thursday sentenced an antique dealer to only 10 days in jail and gave him a choice of when to start serving it for failing to file income tax returns.

Paul A. Kaylor, 56, elected to go to jail Jan. 10 so he can be home for the Christmas season.

The judge called it "the shortest sentence I have ever given in one of these cases," but said he felt obliged to impose some term.

Kaylor admitted he stopped filing tax returns in 1948 when he became ill. He said he planned to square his accounts with the government with some money he inherited in 1958. But agents caught up with him beforehand.

Rees Trial Set Jan. 25 Pending Mental Exam

BALTIMORE (AP) — A federal judge Thursday ordered a psychiatric examination for Melvin Davis Rees Jr., the jazz musician charged with the kidnap-slaying of a Virginia Couple, their two children, and a Maryland woman.

Judge Roszel C. Thomsen also set Jan. 25 as the trial date for Rees if he is declared mentally competent.

The order for a psychiatric examination was granted at the request of court-appointed defense attorneys William J. Evans and William J. O'Donnell. They said certain papers and other documents allegedly found in Rees' possession indicated to them that he was insane or mentally unable to help defend himself.

Rees, 31, is charged in Baltimore District Federal Court with the kidnap-slaying of Mrs. Mildred Jackson of Apple Grove, Va., and her 5-year-old daughter, Susan. Their bodies were found March 21, 1959, near Gambrills, Md.

A former resident of Hyattsville Md., Rees is also charged in Virginia with murdering Mrs. Jackson's husband, Carroll, and their 18-month old daughter, Janet. Their bodies were found March 4, 1959 near Fredericksburg, Va.

Maryland officials also charged Rees with the 1957 slaying of Mrs. Margaret Harold, a civilian employe at Ft. Meade, Md., who was shot to death as she sat in a car parked on a lonely road south of Baltimore.

Rees was arrested June 24 while working as a piano salesman in West Memphis, Ark., and was indicted June 28 by a federal grand jury in the deaths of Mrs. Jackson and the older daughter.

Rees pleaded innocent.

HOW YOU CAN SET UP AN IMMEDIATE $10,000 ESTATE

Through periodic investment in a mutual fund, plus the new feature of reducing term insurance, you can set up an immediate estate of from $2,500 to $10,000, and thus combine the advantages of dollar cost averaging on your investment with low-cost insurance protection.

Today many prudent investors are turning to these plans as a safeguard against inflation, and as future protection for themselves or their families. Through mutual funds you get the benefit of diversification and the continuous supervision of professional management.

In case of death before completion of the plan, the insurance company will take care of all remaining payments in one lump sum. As in all investing the portion invested is subject to fluctuations in value and may be worth more or less at any given time.

Medical Comments

By The Associated Press

Medical comments this week touch on regenerated hearts, dreams, and a warning about rebound tumbling.

HEARTS

The heart has some ability to regenerate new tissue, says a Soviet physiologist, Prof. Nikolai Sinitsyn.

Experimenting with dogs, he removed small pieces of the heart wall, and replaced the missing bits with flaps of borrowed skin or muscle, or synthetic materials. The flaps provided a scaffold for growth of new connective tissue to make the heart wall strong again, he reports. The method might be useful for strengthening areas of the heart damaged by heart attacks or by tumors.

BOUNCE

Rebound tumbling—which can turn you into a gymnastic jumping-jack—can be much fun, but dangerous unless their use is wisely controlled, a medical team warns in the journal of the American Medical Association.

The physicians tell of five young men who suffered severe nerve injury, with three paralyzed and one fatally hurt. In four cases, they were hurt while trying backward somersaults. The physicians urge that qualified instructors always be on hand, and that no one try dangerous maneuvers until he's well-trained.

DREAMS

Dreams occur during about 20 per cent of all our time asleep, even if people don't remember dreaming. And it's all to the good that we do dream, says the publication, Therapeutic Notes. Volunteers prevented from dreaming became anxious and found it difficult to concentrate. They were awakened whenever movements of their eyes during sleep indicated they were about to begin dreaming.

Medical Comments

By The Associated Press

Medical comments this week touch on regenerated hearts, dreams, and a warning about rebound tumbling.

HEARTS

The heart has some ability to regenerate new tissue, says a Soviet physiologist, Prof. Nikolai Sinitsyn.

Experimenting with dogs, he removed small pieces of the heart wall, and replaced the missing bits with flaps of borrowed skin or muscle, or synthetic materials. The flaps provided a scaffold for growth of new connective tissue to make the heart wall strong again, he reports. The method might be useful for strengthening areas of the heart damaged by heart attacks or by tumors.

BOUNCE

Rebound tumbling—which can turn you into a gymnastic jumping-jack—can be much fun, but dangerous unless their use is wisely controlled, a medical team warns in the journal of the American Medical Association.

The physicians tell of five young men who suffered severe nerve injury, with three paralyzed and one fatally hurt. In four cases, they were hurt while trying backward somersaults. The physicians urge that qualified instructors always be on hand, and that no one try dangerous maneuvers until he's well-trained.

DREAMS

Dreams occur during about 20 per cent of all our time asleep, even if people don't remember dreaming. And it's all to the good that we do dream, says the publication, Therapeutic Notes. Volunteers prevented from dreaming became anxious and found it difficult to concentrate. They were awakened whenever movements of their eyes during sleep indicated they were about to begin dreaming.

Local Group Attends Chamber Workshop

A delegation from the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce yesterday attended a workshop sponsored by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in Frederick.

The workshop is being conducted in the Officer's Club at Fort Detrick.

Attending are C. M. Sanner, president, Robert L. Ebert and Karl W. Bachman, vice presidents, Henry W. Price, Robert G. Garner and Robert C. Petersen, manager.

TV Notes

NEW YORK (UPI)—The new man in charge of TV production for 20th Century-Fox in Hollywood is Roy Huggins, who created and wrote many of the early scripts for Warner Brothers' "Maverick" series. Which would seem to indicate that you can look for more humorous touches in 20th's "Hong Kong" TV adventure series which apparently is one of the few new ones of this season that will catch on.

Audiences in the New York CBS studio where "Candid Camera" is taped every Tuesday night get a surprise. Producer Allen Funt has hidden cameras taking footage of spectators as they arrive and go to their seats, and 15 minutes before the taping starts, these pictures are run off on a large screen for the studio audience.

The sound portion of the recent "Omnibus" NBC program, "He Shall Have Power," a documentary about the American presidency, was released to Radio Free Europe for translation into five eastern European languages and transmission behind the Iron Curtain.

Connie Stevens, Warner Brothers' star in motion pictures and a regular in the studios' TV series "Hawaiian Eye," is no dope. When asked why she installed a badminton court in the backyard of her North Hollywood home instead of the traditional swimming pool, she answered: "There is a swimming pool on the 'Hawaiian Eye' set, so I don't need one at home."

Singer Jo Stafford is set to star in a series of 13 one-hour variety specials to be started in England next June that will be made available via syndication to buyers anywhere in the world. This type of programming has virtually been monopolized by the networks heretofore. Each show, with different guest stars, is estimated to cost approximately $100,000. Both studio and location backgrounds throughout the British Isles will be utilized.

List-Making Helps Keep Holiday Nerves In Check

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Henrietta Fleck knows how you can get through holiday madness without crippling your nerves.

"Just make good lists now of all the things you have to do," Dr. Fleck said in an interview. Where matters domestic are concerned, Dr. Fleck's considered an efficiency expert. She's chairman of the Home Economics Department at New York University.

"Key to order out of confusion," she said, "is the master list—the list listing all the lists you should make."

She suggested making lists of people to whom you must send Christmas cards, people for whom you want to buy gifts, gift ideas, food lists for the butcher, baker and groceryman, lists of social engagements, a timetable for Christmas Eve, Christmas Day and New Year's Eve festivities.

"With lists you don't have to remember anything," Dr. Fleck said. "Just follow the list, checking off each item as accomplished."

To get the most out of the list-system Dr. Fleck said it's also vital to list work assignments for all members of the family — from junior to grandpa.

Dr. Fleck also said that the weeks before Christmas are not the time for creative cooking, not even for you culinary queens.

She suggested taking full advantage of canned and ready-prepared frozen family meals between now and Christmas.

"For informal meals, why not stock up on paper cups, plates, place mats and napkins," she said. "They will save hours of dish-washing. And you can use these supplies to serve drop - in guests through the holidays."

For the formal meals that are supposed to go off without a hitch around holiday time, Dr. Fleck said it's a wise woman who checks all table lines well in advance.

Woman To Woman

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Women who complain about housework now have a heart expert — with documentation — to prove that clearing the clutter is backbreaking.

Dr. Herman K. Hellerstein put it this way:

"Actually most jobs are a cinch compared to housework."

The cardiologist made that point in a report to the Eighth World Congress of the International Society for the Rehabilitation of the Disabled.

Dr. Hallerstein is director of the Cleveland Area Heart Society's Work Classification Clinic, a pioneer clinic devoted to helping heart patients return to work.

He is known for his studies of the stress and energy cost of jobs — including those of blue and white collar workers.

Housework was hoisted to pedestal level when the doctor reported that physical training can benefit some heart patients by helping them to face emotional and physical stress with steadier nerves and lower pulse rates.

He said strenuous housework burns up 6.6 calories per minute — compared to a mere four to five calories per minute for such chores as gardening, golfing, or walking briskly.

To prove further that those working outside the home have easy jobs compared to housework, the heart doctor ticked off the calories used per minutes in various jobs.

Clerks, for example, spend 1.6 calories per minute; blue collar workers in factories, 2 per minute; and coal miners, 4.3 per minute.

By measuring the physical reactions of workers at industrial plants and in offices, the heart expert and his associates found that many jobs are far less strenuous than leisure time activities — in addition to being easier than housework.

It was found, for example, that the hardest part of a girl Friday's office job may be walking off for a coffee break, especially if she walks briskly.

But the office workers, for the most part, aren't sitting on their hands all day.

Dr. Hellerstein said some white collar workers holding down desk jobs burn up more energy than those doing hard labor — because in many laboring jobs there usually is much more time for rest between spurts of activity.

Sir Isaac Newton played with soap bubbles to discover the composition of light.

Lesser Washington Officials Wait For Democratic Ax To Fall

By LEON BURNETT

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The day of reckoning is near for hundreds of government officials whose careers have been built on the shifting sands of politics.

The 10 Republican cabinet members have accepted their fate, of course, along with their top assistants. But down through the administration's chain of command are many other persons who may or may not be swept out by the new Democratic administration.

Many of those who could be replaced by President-elect John F. Kennedy are in the cabinet departments themselves.

Others hold posts in the 65 independent agencies, ranging from such major regulatory bodies as the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) to little-known ones like the Committee for Reciprocity Information.

Some of the "Big 10" departments are likely to be harder hit than others.

In the Treasury Department, for example, there are 75 persons who could lose their appointive posts. In others, such as Interior and Commerce, the likely casualties are fewer.

All over Washington, many lesser officials who bet their jobs on a Republican victory in November are spending this transition period wondering whether the Democrat knife will cut down to their level.

They are in the twilight zone—not high enough in government to get the decision along with the election returns, and not low enough to claim the protection of Civil Service laws.

Some of this middle group, however, do have job security in the form of long-term appointments not due to run out during the next four years.

Next year, after the new administration has gone into high gear, will come that periodic Washington phenomenon—a parade of people moving out of offices all over town, and their replacements moving in to take advantage of what is left of the spoils system.

Since most of the decisions on the smaller jobs will not be made until the Kennedy cabinet is complete and the job of reorganization well under way, it is impossible to determine now how many persons will be affected.

This however, is a general picture of the prospects in some of the departments:

—Defense: The deputy and assistant secretaries are likely to go, along with their chief, Thomas S. Gates Jr. The secretaries of the three armed services are on the vulnerable list, as are their undersecretaries and immediate assistants.

—Interior: In addition to the secretary, there are 15 top appointive officials. There are 100 lesser ones, many of whom are not likely to be affected.

—Agriculture: Changes likely only at the top administrative level.

—Health, Education and Welfare: President appoints only the chiefs of the various subdivisions. Education director Lawrence G. Berthick already has resigned. Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney is serving an appointive term that expires in January.

—Justice: FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover already has been assured of keeping his job. Heads of the various other justice branches subject to replacement, although some are veterans and could stay. U. S. attorneys all over the country could be affected.

—Labor: Changes mostly at the top.

—Post Office: A number of postmasterships around the country can become available to the Democrats. Only a few high-level shifts in the department iself.

Outside the cabinet, one key official already has been given a new lease on his job: Allen W. Dulles, head of the Central Intelligence Agency.

The cat is by nature fastidious—therefore, requires little or no care or attention, beyond proper feeding and providing the necessary sanitary facilities..

Four-Yolk Egg Sets Off Cackle Of Controversy

LIBERTY, N.Y. (AP)—Cluck at this if you will, but if there was ever a queen among hens she's one of those on Joseph Mencher's poultry farm.

She laid an egg with four yolks. She also set off a cackle of controversy among egg experts as to whether her's was the first on record.

The breakfast bargain was discovered Tuesday and the number of yolks which came tumbling out of the egg was soon far outmatched by the number of astonished gasps which came tumbling out of people.

The egg was laid by a Brender Leghorn and the Mencher family certainly would like to find out which of their hens did it, so they could do a lot of crowing in her honor. That, however, doesn't seem likely. They have 35,000 Brender Leghorns and they don't record from which each egg came.

The four-yolk specimen happened to have been held out of the day's sales to markets because it was extra large. Mrs. Mencher decided to cook it for her family.

She broke it—and screamed.

Before long, people from far and wide were dashing in to see it.

Off to Cornell University went inquiries. Dr. Frederick B. Hutt, professor of animal genetics, termed the four-yolker unique to his knowledge. Dr. Hutt got in touch with Dr. Alexis Romanoff, a retired Cornell professor and one of the world's foremost authorities on bird eggs.

Dr. Romanoff said he'd heard a lot of stories about such but they always turned out to be jokes. Some wag dumping separate egg yolks together.

An historic event in chickendom seemed assured until a consultation with Wharton J. Bruce of New York City. He is chairman of the advisory committee of the Poultry and Egg National Board, a private marketing consultant and described by one source as "a man who knows everything there is to know about eggs." Bruce promptly cracked the sensation into little pieces.

"I've not only seen an egg with four yolks, but I've seen one with five. What's more, I saw both of them cracked, too, so I know."

Asst. Atty. Gen. Doub Submits Resignation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Asst. Atty. Gen. George Cochran Doub has submitted his resignation, effective the end of this month, the White House announced Wednesday.

Doub has held the post for about 4½ years. Before that he was U.S. attorney for Maryland.

Doub currently is in charge of the Justice Department's civil division.

Doub told newsmen he plans to return to private law practice in Baltimore.

17 Pickpocket Days To Yuletide

NEW YORK (UPI)— There are only 17 more pickpocketing days before Christmas, so shoppers beware.

John Stewart, chief inspector of American Express Company and head of a worldwide "private eye" organization, has learned all the tricks of the pickpocket trade, and he says that their activities increase by 100 per cent at the Christmas season.

Stewart, a former FBI agent, suggests three basic precautions against being victimized by a "dip." They are:

—A man should keep his wallet flat and thin in his inside jacket pocket, and he never should flash a roll of bills.

—A woman should keep her hand on her pocketbook clasp in crowds and hold her bag in her lap when sitting down.

—Whenever possible pay for expensive purchases, meals or accommodations by check, charge account or credit card.

For some reason Stewart has not yet fathomed, pickpocketing is almost strictly a man's field, but many of the victims are women.

Ted Kennedy Learns About Congolese

LEOPOLDVILLE, the Congo (AP) — Edward (Ted) Kennedy, youngest brother of the U. S. president-elect, learned some things about Congolese folk Wednesday.

Leaving the U. S. Embassy, he saw three women in bright robes parading along the street with huge baskets balanced on their heads.

Across the road galloped Kennedy, camera at the ready.

But the women turned haughtily away. Kennedy had to content himself with a shot of their backs.

An embassy car piloted him out to the tumbledown townships of the suburbs.

Kennedy ambled round a dusty market place, threading his way through hordes of grinning urchins and chattering women.

At one stall he declined an offer of toasted caterpillars.

Kennedy is on a learn-about-African trip.

Adm. Byrd Memorial Planned In New Zealand

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (UPI)—Friends and admirers of the late Adm. Richard E. Byrd plan to build a memorial to the famed explorer high above Wellington in the form of soaring wings facing southward to the Antarctic, it was announced here Wednesday.

The Adm. Richard E. Byrd Fellowship announced plans for the memorial, to be built on the highest hill overlooking this city, following a meeting held here Tuesday night in honor of the polar pioneer.

The idea for the monument originated with A. Leigh Hunt, founder of the New Zealand-American Society and the Antarctic Society, who two years ago also founded the Byrd Fellowship.

Tracy Simpson, a friend of Byrd for more than 30 years, was appointed chairman of the group which plans to erect the memorial.

"We had a plan for a memorial sometime," Simpson said, "but last night's meeting showed there were tremendous interest both here and overseas.

"The enthusiasm was exemplified by a telegram of good wishes from U.S. President-elect John F. Kennedy received by the fellowship yesterday."

"Work cats," attached to stores, factories, institutions, etc., must be properly fed, since they can not sustain themselves on rodents alone. In truth, the hide and tail of a rodent are poisonous and their effect upon the cat must be offset with quantities of milk.

Play Is Now Important $1.65 Billion A Year Big Business

By RALPH VILLERS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Play is big business — something like $1.65 billion a year — and the Christmas season is when it rings the cash registers loudest.

The toy business is up this year. The 450 members of the Toy Manufacturers of the U.S.A., Inc., a trade organization, report shipments for the first nine months of 1960 were running 7.7 per cent ahead of the same period in 1959.

At the same time, imports of toys have been cutting into the domestic market. Imports rose by 85 per cent from 1955 to 1959.

But the population increase has broadened the market, and there's no lack of customers.

Standard Of Living Rises

Along with the population explosion goes the general rise in the standard of living — a very important factor which makes more costly toys more readily acceptable.

Not many years back practically the only costly items were in the realm of electric train sets, bicycles and the other locomotion toys.

Today, there are numerous toys in the $20 to $30 and higher categories — and they're selling.

Some of the larger dolls carry a $25 or $30 price tag. There's a Yukon dog sled this year big enough for a child to sit in, and equipped with a harness for dog locomotion. The price is $29.95.

Emenee is offering the first electric chord organ on the toy market at $29.95. The American Flyer Stock Car Race, in which two tiny cars race around a metal track under electric power, sells for $34.95. And the Automat, a series of kits with precision gears and other equipment for constructing automation models, retails anywhere from $44.95 to $200.

Sells Life-Size Moose

And, for the person who wants to spend a little more, Steiff, a German maker of stuffed toys, has a life-size moose at $750.

But, like the other producers of higher price toys, it also offers low-cost items, say a lady bird for 35 cents.

The Toy Manufacturers credit the rise in the standard of living for opening the market for higher priced items.

But, here is an interesting fact. Charles S. Raizen, president of the manufacturers' group, notes that with the rising tide of sales, profits of member firms averaged under 2 cents per dollar of sales in 1959. That compares with an average of 4.8 cents per dollar of sales earned by all U.S. manufacturing corporations in 1959.

Suggest Retail Prices

Another thing toy manufacturers have to contend with is price cutting. They suggest retail prices, but stores out after the business trim the prices — sometimes to even less than the wholesale cost.

For example, one $12 mechanical toy was going for $5.55 in a New York store. A $6 game was selling for under $4 at another metropolitan department store.

Price shouldn't be the considered factor in buying toys, according to the Toy Guidance Council, an independent organization which has a group of educators pass on toys and age-grade them for suitability.

"Poor quality toys can be wasteful from not only the money standpoint, but also can be dangerous and frustrating to a child," a spokesman pointed out.

Challenge The Child

"The key to toy buying," he said, "should be age suitability, along with a knowledge of the child. If it's too complicated, or too simple, its no good. It has to stimulate the imagination and challenge the child."

An example of what he meant was the virtual failure of the Space Age toy trend some five or six years ago. The toys of that time were of the space fantasy or Buck Rogers type, the spokesman said, but since Sputnik and the satellites there's a resurgence of toys in the space fac' category, and the sales are growing.

A vice president of the council noted that he had never seen such a collection of professional-type science toys.

Such is one of the reasons that U. S. toy manufacturers are claiming ability to get an increasing share of the consumer's dollar.

Thruway Meet Today Delayed

The Mayor and Council, Potomac Edison Company and State Roads Commission will conduct a joint meeting here probably next week concerning legal matters involved in construction of the Cumberland Thruway.

The meeting was set for 10 a. m. in the board room of the Liberty Trust Company building today but was postponed.

Expected here from the SRC is Joseph Buscher, assistant attorney general attached to the SRC staff.

A major point to be covered in the talks is the relocation of utilities.

In an October memorandum to members of council, certain phases, particularly as they apply to the new Wineow Street overpass, were outlined by City Attorney William R. Carscaden.

The city requested the meeting with the SRC to iron out matters which were not specifically spelled out in the construction contract.

Note Of Protest

BELGRADE (UPI) — Tanjug, the Yugoslav news agency, said Thursday it had learned that "a sharp note of protest" had been handed by Yugoslavia to the Communist Chinese charge da'ffaires in Belgrade. The Chinese representative "has refused to accept the note," Tanjug reported.

The news agency said the protest was made "in connection with the statements of the prime minister of the state council of the Peoples Republic of China, Chou En-lai, against Yugoslavia, her state leadership and independent policy in his speech at the Albanian embassy in Peking Nov. 29, 1960."

Birth Control

TAIPEI (UPI)—The Nationalist Chinese government has decided to resort to birth control to curb the fast-growing population of this mountainous island, the China news reported Thursday. The government decision came after repeated warnings from experts that Formosa would experience a "population explosion" unless birth control is put into practice immediately.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Holiday Garb Features Fabulous Fabrics

Right about now, holiday-at-home wear should be the first item on your shopping list. This season you'll don the ultimate in elegant informals; not for years have fabric textures, colors and decorations been so rich, so lush.

You'll want at least one splash of the newest and most startling fashion color for Christmas — bright sizzling orange. And you'll want more than one version of this minute's most popular silhouette — the easy overblouse, good news for most mid-sections in this month of merry overfeasting.

As you tour the salons and boutiques, you'll spy a lot of stunning suggestions to settle many of your gift-giving problems, too.

Novelty pants, culottes and skirts in unusual cloths and colors, coordinated with equally dazzling tops, are exciting to wear now through February. They're also meant to travel in style to winter resorts. Print or plain, bold-checked or striped, metallic or embossed, they come in taffeta, silk brocade, tapestry, polished cotton, velvet and velveteen, lace, lame, synthetics and a whole new range of stretch fabrics.

Even more versatile are the tops, whether you choose them to be separates or coordinates. As separates, these will have strong appeal to all of you (and all on your gift list) whose contours can't cope with pants.

They can be ruffled blouses, tank tops or tunics. They can masquerade as Mandarin jackets or peasant shirts with voluminous sleeves. They are sweaters of all kinds, slipover or cardigan. Most of them copy, of course, the loose fit of the overblouse. These are no shapeless chemises, but are gently molded. Many are made to be belted or sashed, or perhaps drawn snug at the hipline.

Sleeve and collar detail inject individual interest. Deep V cuts, polo necklines, tailored collars or cowl effects "dress" the tops up or down, as you prefer. There are sleeves for every purpose, none at all to bare pretty arms, or wide raglan cuts and cape sleeves to keep femininity cosy on cold evenings.

Ah, but the materials are the thing! Today's tops repeat the awesome offbeat fabrics presented in the pants collections, with one major addition—even more glitter, both in the fabric itself and in decorative trim.

Good Christmas Mailing Practices Are Suggested

Ten tips on good Christmas mailing practices were given yesterday by Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield. The pointers are:

Mail Christmas cards and parcels for distant states before December 10 and for local delivery not later than December 16. Remember that the best time to avoid crowds in most post offices is before 10 a. m., or between 1:30 and 3:30 p. m. Also, use stamp vending machines if stamp windows are crowded.

Address mail correctly, including full name and address, postal zone numbers and your return address. Write or print clearly.

Although Christmas cards may be sent unsealed for a three-cent rate, the four-cent first class sealed rate is desirable because it automatically assures forwarding if the addressee has moved and left a new address, or the card is returned if it is undeliverable (provided the sender has put a return address on it).

Don't mail money in Christmas gifts or parcels. Use postal money orders or checks.

When making a large mailing of Christmas cards, separate them into "local" and "out-of-town" bundles, using adhesive bands which were delivered by postmen.

Pack and wrap securely. Cushioning should be placed on all sides of the Christmas gift, and the carton should be wrapped in heavy paper and tied with strong twine. A card with your return address and the destination address should be put inside the parcel to aid in delivery if the outside wrapper should be lost.

Parcels containing delicate gifts must be marked "fragile," and foodstuffs should be marked "perishable" if they are subject to spoilage.

Insure parcels and register letters of real value. Where only proof of delivery is desired for letters of no intrinsic value, Certified Mail is useful.

If you don't know the answer to a mailing problem—ask. Postal employes are happy to help you by answering your questions on mailing regulations.

Pilgrims Congregate By Thousands Every Christmas To Hear Bethlehem Bells

JERUSALEM (UPI) — In the open fields south of this city pilgrims gather every Christmas morning to listen for the far-off bells of Bethlehem.

They congregate before dawn to sing, pray and meditate. In one glance they can see the entire landscape which Jesus knew so well—the little town and city where he was born and died.

In the mists of dawn they see the rooftops of the birth town, now owned by Jordan, which has been in an official state of war with Israel since 1947. Pilgrims can go there only by making applications which must be approved by both governments.

But in the open fields on the Israeli side of the border, as the sun rises higher in the eastern sky, little groups strain their ears to catch the sound of bells from the Church of the Nativity down in Bethlehem.

Throughout the Israeli and the Jordanian sides of the Holy Land many special services are held on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

Americans living here have an advantage over many others because they can see day-by-day all the places where Jesus lived.

Americans Cross Border

They can attend Mass in Nazareth where He prayed and stroll the streets where He spent His [illegible]. They can go freely across the border, closed to people of both sides, and spend the holy night in the grotto where He was born.

The busiest man in Jerusalem on Christmas probably will be Herbert L. Minard, director of YMCA the most popular and by far the best-equipped club in the Israeli capital.

Minard, who comes from Sacramento, Calif., and his wife, Marcella, from Fresno, Calif., will be too busy on Christmas day to go to Bethlehem.

Celebrations at the "Y" go on for a whole week. There will be a party for some 400 children of all Christian religions, a Christmas Eve carol service, and many other activities.

At midnight the carillon will ring out from the top of the 152-foot Jesus Tower. The day after Christmas there will be a dinner for 100 guests.

With all their preparations completed, Mr. and Mrs. Minard usually steal away late on Christmas Eve and leave the city for a plateau amid the Judean hills, a mile from Bethlehem.

There in the Field of the Shepherds a brief open-air service is held at dusk in the crisp winter air.

Worshippers utter a few words of welcome for the star over Bethlehem and thanks for the quiet of the Holy Land.

They eat Oriental-style roast lamb and pitta bread, just as did those shepherds more than 1,900 years ago, when the news came to them that a miracle had been wrought and the Savior was born.

Yankee Bluebeard Loved Money, Hated Bungling

By EVERETT R. IRWIN

CHICAGO (UPI)—H. H. Holmes had three great loves—women, money and strange buildings.

Money was his favorite.

Holmes also had one great hate—bungling. His own bungling, and his greed for money, led to his conviction in a monstrous swindler-murder plot.

When he stood on the gallows at Philadelphia's Moyamensing Prison on May 7, 1896, he cautioned the hangman:

"Don't bungle."

The hangman didn't, and so ended the career of a Yankee Bluebeard who reigned over a "murder castle" in Chicago and was rated the murder master of the Gay 90s.

Nobody knows how many persons died at the hands of Holmes, a gentle-mannered druggist with a handlebar mustache, a way with women and a lust for blood.

At least 12, police said.

Twenty-seven, Holmes once said—but he promptly repudiated the admission.

Scores or even hundreds, others speculated. They recalled that Holmes advertised for roomers during the 1893 World's Fair and that hundreds of visitors to Chicago vanished during that time.

Many of them, police suspected, met violent ends in Holmes' house of death.

The gaunt, three-story building (at 63rd and Wallace) on Chicago's South Side housed Holmes' drug store and jewelry store at street level.

The remainder of the building was a nightmarish conglomeration of trapdoors, sliding panels, secret stairways, soundproof rooms, torture chambers and an "operating" room with a butcher's table.

When police explored the murder castle after Holmes' unmasking, they also found a crematory and vats of acid and quicklime to dispose of his victims and the evidence.

Holmes, born Herman W. Mudgett in Gilmanton, N.H., turned up in Chicago in 1890 as a druggist. His career up to that time had included corpse-snatching, swindling, theft, seduction, bigamy, poisoning and forgery.

He maintained his versatility. Once he sold for $20,000 an "invention" for converting water into illuminating gas. The gas company insisted he had tapped one of its mains. On another occasion he sold the stock of a resturant which he did not own for $900.

Holmes was most noted, however, for the pretty girls who were attracted to him. None seemed to stay long.

The first, Emaline C. Cigrand, dropped from sight after only a few weeks as his secretary. Her fiance, Robert E. Phelps, disappeared at the same time.

Then came Emily Van Tassel. Neighbors saw her for a while, and then they didn't see her.

Then there was Mrs. Julia L. Conner, also a secretary. She vanished with her 8-year-old daughter Pearl.

The next Holmes favorite was Minnie Williams of Fort Worth, Tex. Holms already had two wives but he proposed to Miss Williams and she wrote her beautiful sister, Nannie, to come to Chicago from Texas for the wedding.

They disappeared too, but not until they had signed over $50,000 worth of Texas real estate to him.

Holmes' downfall came after he arranged with one of his stooges, Ben Pitzel, to take out a $10,000 life insurance policy and disappear. Holmes was to procure a body, identify it as Pitzel's and they would split the loot.

But the greedy Holmes murdered the real Pitzel in Philadelphia, making it appear that death resulted from an accidental explosion. The insurance company paid off, and Holmes talked Pitzel's widow Carrie out of virtually all the money. She thought her husband was merely hiding out for a while.

Holmes, however, had bungled by bringing a convict in on the plot and failing to pay him his $500 cut. The disgruntled convict tipped off authorities, who began an investigation.

Mrs. Pitzel insisted her husband was alive somewhere in South America, but admitted she was a little worried about the whereabouts of three children—Alice, 15, Nellie, 13, and Howard, 10. Holmes had taken them off her hands because she was ill, she said.

A Pinkerton detective retraced Holmes' trail and established that the children had been murdered. The girls' bodies were found buried in a Toronto, Ont., basement and the bones of little Howard were found in Irvington, Ind.

Meanwhile, police dug into Holmes' murder castle. In a secret room in the basement they found the butcher's table stained by human blood.

In a big stove in the basement room they found Minnie Williams' watch chain, Nannie Williams' garter buckle. Here and there they found the bleached bones of human bodies.

On Nov. 2, 1895, Holmes was found guilty of first degree murder in the slaying of one victim—Pitzel.

Romulo Sees Closer Philippine-U.S. Ties

MANILA (UPI) — Carlos P. Romulo, Philippine ambassador to Washington, Wednesday predicted closer Philippine - United States relations during the administration of President-elect John F. Kennedy.

He warned, however, of possible changes in U.S. policy which could affect the Philippines economically and militarily.

Romulo was summoned here by President Carlos P. Garcia to report on possible shifts in U.S. foreign policy as a result of the change of administration in the United States.

During a lengthy conference with Garcia at the presidential Malacanang Palace, Romulo said he brought "the cordial greetings of the President-elect to the Filipino people."

Appeals Court Affirms Marijuana Conviction

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — The Court of Appeals Wednesday affirmed the Montgomery County Circuit Court conviction of William Carr Fulton for possession of marijuana.

Fulton contended the state had failed to establish possession and that the testimony of two of his accomplices, one of whom was granted immunity, was not corroborated.

The high court said "the appellants' own testimony at the trial, his admissions to the police officers and the additional evidence adduced by the State employ corroborated his alleged accomplices and were sufficient to support the verdict of the jury."

Fulton was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction at the conclusion of his trial.

Demo "Bailout" Show Set

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — President-elect Kennedy's brother-in-law Peter Lawford said Wednesday he and Frank Sinatra will stage a pre-inaugural review featuring some of Hollywood's top personalities to clear up a $2 million Democratic campaign debt.

Joining Lawford and Sinatra for the spectacular Jan. 19 in the National Armory at Washington, D. C., will be Sammy Davis Jr., Tony Curtis, Janet Leigh, Shirley MacLaine, Harry Belafonte, Milton Berle, Nat King Cole and Dean Martin, among others.

Lawford, married to John Kennedy's sister, Pat, said the Democrats still owed $2 million of the $9 million spent on the campaign.

"This show, a special review will bail them out," Lawford said. "We will net more than $1.9 million on the basis of tickets already sold. The armory seats 14,000.

"This will be the biggest take in show business history for a one - nighter!" he exclaimed. "We've already sold out 72 boxes, which seat 10 people, at $10,000 a box."

Lawford added, "It will also be the first time a man has gone into the White House completely out of debt after a campaign."

Adlai E. Stevenson still is $500,000 in debt from his last campaign, Lawford said. "The show we're putting on may also pay up his past campaign expenses."

Song writers Sammy Cahn and James Van Heusen will help produce the review, to be directed by Roger Edens.

Also appearing will be master-of-ceremonies Joey Bishop, Red Skelton, Judy Garland, Mahalia Jackson, Ella Fitzgerald, Gene Kelly, Juliet Prowse and Nelson Riddle's orchestra, Lawford said.

"Everybody who appears in the review will go to the formal inaugural ball the following night, Jan. 20," Lawford said.

A Promotion For Rep. Powell

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) apparently is setting out early to prove himself worthy of the committee chairmanship he almost certainly will receive when the new Congress is organized. Majority members of the House Committee on Education and Labor have been called by Powell to a meeting on Monday to discuss strategy and plans for the new 87th Congress.

Completion of studies on new bills in advance of Congress's formal opening presumably will open the way for quick action on a variety of issues next year. The Negro pastor-politician already has predicted that within a month after the Congress convenes his committee will approve bills providing a $1.25 minimum wage and federal aid to education.

The Education-Labor chairmanship devolves on Powell by virtue of the House's controversial seniority practice. The former chairman, Rep. Graham A. Barden (D-N.C.), did not stand for re-election this year and Powell is next in line. Southern Congressmen, who in the last Congress headed 15 of the 21 standing committees of the House, prefer to swallow this bitter pill rather than breach the unwritten seniority rule.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) is reported to be standing firm against any attempt to dilute Powell's authority by splitting the present committee into two groups, one on labor, to be headed by Powell, the other on education, with Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D-W.Va.) as chairman. Some of the opposition to Powell was softened by the evidence of party regularity he displayed this fall in stumping through 15 states in behalf of John F. Kennedy. Another big obstacle to his accession was removed when a federal jury was unable to reach a verdict in Powell's trial on income tax evasion charges last April. It was reported that the jury stood 10-to-2 for acquittal of the Harlem Democrat.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

The Wheat Hoard

Prior to the present harvest, the Government of the United States owned about 1,300,000,000 bushels of wheat. The 1960 crop increased this hoard. Altogether the surplus crops cost the taxpayer about $4,000,000,000 a year.

If there is to be a rationalization of government costs, something has to be done about farm surpluses. Whenever city persons write about agricultural problems, the farm experts contend that we do not know what we are talking about, which is an easy but meaningless answer. We do know that taxes are unconscionably high and that food prices are ridiculously high and that the purchasing value of the dollar is low.

This the city dweller does know and he is not pleased about it. In fact, one of the first problems that the Kennedy Administration will have to tackle is the deterioration of urban life, the increase of slum areas, the rise of urban juvenile crime, the high cost of urban living and the blighting of suburban areas. When the cost of food exceeds the ability of a family to live on its income, whether from earnings or charity (now euphemistically called relief), social and moral conditions in cities deteriorate.

The maintenance of farm prices contributes to the high cost of food. At the same time, the stockpiling of food serves no useful purpose except to place an increasing burden of taxes upon the necks of a people whose currency is decreasing in value.

This, then, is what the country faces. The Eisenhower Administration has made no effort to deal with this problem, much less solve it. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson made some startling moves, but he was unsupported by his colleagues who could not stand up against the waves of strongly expressed unpopularity. In fact, although what is known as the farm vote is no longer decisive as the 1960 election established, the historic memory on the subject differs from reality.

Actually, this problem cannot be contained in the Department of Agriculture. Any solution must include the State Department which must concern itself with protests from such countries as Canada (wheat and cheese) and Denmark (butter) that are worried over our dumping large quantities of surplus foods upon world markets or to feed the hungry in Asia and Africa who cannot afford to pay our prices. It must include the Department of Commerce for identical reasons. It is no longer possible to deal with these broad problems as though they were the private domain of some official. Food is a national problem and the Treasury must have something to say about the value of our currency and the prospect of taxes.

In a word, when a country holds $4,000,000,000 of frozen crops it has so much of its liquid wealth tied up in a dead man's fist, which it cannot employ for useful purposes. President-elect Kennedy's father, Joseph, was a member of both Hoover Commissions which made a very serious attempt to find out what was wrong with a paralyzed executive branch of government that could not deal with problems that faced it and that required immediate action.

Brother Robert was a member of the staff of one of the Hoover Commissions. It is to be hoped that some of the findings and some of the conclusions are retained in the memories of these men and of Jack who, as Senator, handled some of the bills proposed for enactment. At any rate, a vast amount of material is available in these commissions which can be useful in handling these particular problems to the benefit of both the urban and the rural populations.

Poverty, in a rich country such as ours still is, can only be the product of faulty organization and bad distribution. These can be corrected by keen minds and strong wills. President Kennedy cannot fall back either on the needs of the Roosevelt Administration or the inability of the Eisenhower Administration to act. He will have to make a new agricultural program of his own, consistent with his general economic program, progressive and daring and related to the welfare of both the urban and rural populations. If he cannot do this, the big cities will be in trouble and so will Mr. Kennedy.

As the population switch has been to the big cities, this situation will have to be dealt with realistically.

Eisenhower And Kennedy Should Meet Again

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — What knowledge could President Eisenhower possibly impart in three and a half hours to President-elect Kennedy to enable him to take over the reins of government with the least impairment of the public interest?

Under the Constitution, one man is President a few minutes before noon on January 20, and another is President a few minutes later. Yet the decision to order retaliation in case of "surprise attack" by an enemy in a nuclear age is vested in the man who happens at a particular moment to be President.

There are many decisions of a fateful nature which the new President will have to make, and it would be fine if he were not compelled to act before he had time to familiarize himself with all the nuances of national and international policy.

Ten Presidents have come and gone in the last half century as this correspondent has watched the passing scene. Some have been inadequately prepared. Others have been helped considerably by their predecessors. When there is a change of party — and this has occurred five times since the turn of the century — the transition is more difficult and likely to be more damaging than when the same party continues in power. This time—January 1961—the nation is in the midst of the most critical situation internationally that it has ever faced. Its safety is in danger. In 1913 and 1921 and 1933 and 1953, when parties changed in the White House, there was no direct threat to national security.

Though it is called a "cold war," the military forces of this country and its allies throughout the world are today on a 24-hour alert. Thus the role of the President becomes one of military decision as the commander-in-chief of all armed forces.

To aid the President, there is a constant flow of confidential information gathered by the Central Intelligence Agency and the FBI. This has been conveyed almost daily to President Eisenhower for nearly eight years. From all this, he has derived certain impressions and formulated certain conclusions. How much of this now can be transmitted by a President to the President-elect in three and a half hours of conversation? For if the President-elect really believes what he and his campaign speakers have been saying — namely, that Mr. Eisenhower was a "part-time" President or that he comes to his opinions through "staff studies" and not personal examination — then the value of such a meeting could be discounted. Maybe those statements were just "campaign oratory."

Most men like to form their own conclusions anyway after they have studied all the facts. It will take not weeks but months for the new President to gather the facts and learn at first hand the intricacies of international policy. He will depend, of course, on the new Secretary of State or the incoming Secretary of the Treasury to do much of the spade work but, in the final analysis, no President, under our present system, can in a matter of weeks learn enough to deal wisely with the controversial questions that come before him.

A new President finds himself confronted by administrative and executive tasks as well as by policy-making. Mr. Kennedy has never had any experience as the top executive of a large organization. Most of our Presidents have not had that kind of experience, though, in the case of governors elected to the office of Chief Executive, it may be said that they have become familiar with executive operations on a smaller but nevertheless analogous basis. Maybe this is the reason so few men from Congress have ever been elected to the Presidency.

Whatever else may be said about military commands and the tendency to use the staff system, the truth is that anyone who has had the highest military post in the biggest war of all history has been fully aware of the importance of getting the right kind of advice and making the right decisions. For in war there is usually no second chance in which to rectify errors or correct mistakes of judgment.

Mr. Kennedy's youth has been considered a liability, but it may prove an asset. For the job requires the energy of the young and at times the willingness of youth to take risks. The President-elect will be assuming office with many important policies hanging in the balance. That's why the readiness of President Eisenhower to transmit not only information but advice is an indication of his high-mindedness and devotions to the public interest. Indeed, there should be many such conferences as occurred on Tuesday between the incoming and outgoing President. It is the only practical way to overcome the handicap that any new Chief Executive faces as he takes office and becomes solely responsible for the safety of the nation one minute after twelve o'clock noon on January 20, 1961.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

SHERM THE FIRM — Disclosures of President-elect John F. Kennedy's ideas on White House staff organization recall the activities and operations of one of the toughest, most taciturn and hard-working men ever to occupy an office in the White House.

A former New Hampshire governor, Sherman Adams carried the title "Assistant to the President," which Kennedy has now decided to abolish. He functioned more as an "assistant President" than any of his predecessors on Presidential staffs. He, rather than Eisenhower, conducted staff meetings. He determined what the President should see and not see. He was known widely throughout the government as the man to contact for the answers, rather than the President.

During his heyday, a Washington mot with real meaning was: "What if something should happen to Adams and Eisenhower became President!"

Ike called him "Sherm the firm" in jest, but again with a real point. Sherm was adamant once he made up his mind. He was unreachable by any of the ordinary activities of government officials, legislators or private favor-seekers.

That he had to resign his office under fire of "influence" allegations growing out of his friendship with Boston industrialist Bernard Goldfine, was ironic. The many enemies he made by refusing to acede to their requests came baying at his heels like a pack of hungry wolves. Adams left, a bitter and maligned man. No one was found to fill his shoes.

Kennedy undoubtedly had the perils of such a situation in mind in deciding against an "Assistant to the President" on his staff. But he'll have one or more, in fact if not in name, performing parts of Adams' work.

More Information On Cat Scratch Fever

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

In 1951 I wrote on the first few cases of cat scratch fever that had been reported in the medical literature. Some readers were skeptical and a few branded me a cat hater.

But over the years more and more infections have been noted and the disease is now well established. A simple skin test was developed to help the physicians make the diagnosis.

Since then, we have found that almost 50 per cent of the victims had never been near a cat. The disease was acquired from splinters, thorns, or fragments of beef bone. From this we can assume that the causative virus exists not only on the cat's claws but on other objects.

The virus does no more harm to Figaro and his relatives than the fleas on the back. But in humans, the disease is generalized and involves mainly the lymph glands of the body. The cat scratch is implicated usually by hindsight because the incident usually will have been forgotten by the time fever, weakness, and aching set in. This is understandable because the glands may not swell for 6 to 60 days after the scratch.

The illness may be ushered in by a red lesion the size of a pimple or mosquito bite in the area where the virus entered the body. The glands in the neck, armpits, and groins swell and some soften and exude a thick discharge. Others remain hard and tender. Occasionally the viral infection extends into the brain, producing encephalitis.

Despite the apparent severity of the disorder and lack of a good remedy, all its victims get well. The skin test helps in diagnosis, not only because the majority have forgotten the causative incident but because cat scratch disease mimics many serious disorders like leukemia or Hodgkin's disease.

Cat scratch fever is best avoided by careful handling of cats, especially when they are carried on the shoulder, where they use their claws to hang on. Most cases occur in winter, suggesting that the causative virus is most active during this season.

WEATHER CHANGES

F. R. writes: Every time the weather changes I get pain in my forehead over the left eye. Would you know why?

REPLY

No but there are a few possibilities. Changes in the weather may affect the sinuses or the jaw joint on that side. Arthritis of the neck is suspected if pain is referred from that area.

SHAKES ON SIGNING

M. F. writes: Whenever I have to sign my name in public, as at the bank or a voting booth, I tremble ridiculously. Can anything be done to stop this nonsense?

REPLY

A little more sophistication is in order. I'm sure they don't suspect you of forging checks or voting under false pretenses.

STRENGTH IN PALSY

Mrs. F. A. writes: Do people with parkinsonism lose their strength gradually as the disease progresses?

REPLY

Yes, but it is questionable whether this is caused by muscle fatigue or by the passing years.

GASTRIC POLYPS

M. A. writes: What is done about polyps in the stomach?

REPLY

Surgical removal is recommended even though the majority are not malignant. This is done because stomach polyps are notorious for becoming cancerous at a later date.

BATS IN THE THATCH

D. F. writes: If a bat gets into your hair, does it have to be shaved off?

REPLY

Not the bat. All that is needed is to shampoo the hair unless bitten by the bat. In the circumstances, anti-rabic shots are in order.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Charles Rice found a first edition of a children's dictionary that defined "skirts" as "outer reaches" and gave as an illustrative sentence, "Mr. Smith lives on the skirts of the town." For subsequent printings, the editors deemed it expedient to substitute a sentence with less racy overtones.

Mr. Rice also found an old English dictionary whose editors must have had a sense of humor. As an illustrative sentence using the word "damn," they offered, "Damn this dictionary."

Louis Untermeyer, one of America's cleverest — and most indefatigable — punsters listened impatiently to a recital by a derivative young composer, then dismissed him with, "Rather an American Debussybody, don't you think?"

Untermeyer also deplored a contemporary writer's heavyhanded badinage as "elephantasy" and headed his review of a Boston author's book about the nether regions, "A Yankee Doodle Dante."

Young Visitor Likes Sen. Kennedy, But Remains Unimpressed By Him

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Michael Mahoney, age 3, grandson of Mrs. Florence Mahoney of Georgetown, D. C., paid an official call the other day on Caroline Kennedy, also age 3. He did not find Miss Kennedy receiving callers. She was taking a nap. But he did find the President-elect, his feet on a table, his ear glued to the telephone, his eyes on a TV set.

"Who are you?" asked the President-elect as the young man walked in.

"I'm Mahoney," replied the caller, who, though only 3, is a man's man.

The two men soon got down to business. They were not interested in filling a Cabinet position. They were interested in a new red automobile.

"This is how you steer," explained the President-elect.

Mr. Mahoney had never heard the word "steer" before but he was willing to be steered around the room.

"And this pedal puts you in reverse," explained the President-elect.

Again Mr. Mahoney had never heard the word "reverse," let alone putting himself into reverse. But he was glad to be put in reverse by the President-elect.

In the end, Michael did not get to see Caroline. She remained asleep. But he did have quite a time with the President-elect of the United States.

On the way home, Michael's grandfather explained the importance of the man whom he had visited, the fact that he would soon be governing the most powerful nation in the world. Michael listened carefully. Next day he said:

"I want to go see that man."

"What man?" asked his grandmother.

"That man with the automobile."

GI Families Come Home

American service wives with their families will soon begin flying home at the rate of 15,000 per month in order to stop the drain on the American dollar.

This has created so many hardship cases that the armed services have decided that in some instances it is better to transfer husbands back to the United States than to separate husband and wife. This is because many wives have no families to go back to, would be at a loss in locating in new homes. Rather than have a soldier beset with worry over his wife and children, therefore, some GI's may be transferred back to the United States.

It is one of the most upsetting operations the services have experienced since the end of the Korean War.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department has some significant figures on the amount of U. S. dollars invested abroad, most of which compete with American products and curtail the export of American good abroad.

At the end of 1959, total U. S. direct investments abroad amounted to $30 billion, and it's estimated that by the end of 1960 they will be close to $32 billion. This is considerably more than the $18 billion in gold now in reserve in the USA. The profits on these investments run around $3.2 billion annually, of which around $1 billion will be plowed back into foreign operations.

Most American companies pay just about as high corporate taxes on their investments in Western Europe as they do in this country. But taxes in Latin America, Asia and Africa are much lower. Generally it pays to keep dollar profits abroad rather than bring them back to the United States as American GI families are now being brought back. If more dollar profits were returned, it might not be necessary to return servicemen's families.

Note—Many American companies originally were encouraged to invest abroad in order to help Europe's unfavorable balance of payments. But the rush of investments became so great in order to take advantage of cheap foreign labor that now the balance-of-payments' shoe is on the other foot. American factories abroad not only curtail American exports abroad but in some cases actually help produce goods which are shipped back to the USA.

"Soapy" No Palm-Oiler

Fifteen minutes after the appointment of Gov. Mennen "Soapy" Williams of Michigan was announced as Assistant Secretary of State for African affairs, Republicans had put out a whispering story that the reason was palm oil.

Palm oil, they said, comes from Africa, and the Mennen Soap Company, in which "Soapy" is a stockholder, buys a lot of palm oil.

I happen to be one who has sniffed out a lot of conflict-of-interest cases in other administrations, so I talked to George Mennen, an executive of the Mennen Company. I have known the Mennens for some time, partly because they were once generous enough to help raise money for "Big Brothers" through their Wednesday televised boxing nights. They are honest, conservative Republicans.

"We haven't bought any palm oil for 25 years," George Mennen replied. "Most people don't understand that we are not soap manufacturers, even if the Governor is nicknamed 'Soapy'. We don't even use any basic oil or fats. Furthermore, not one item we use is imported by ourselves. It's purchased from U. S. agents, and we don't know what country it comes from."

"Is it true that Governor Williams' mother is a Republican?" I asked.

"She's my aunt, and certainly she used to be Republican," replied George Mennen. "But I suspect she's been voitng for her son lately."

Note—Williams shaving soap, sometimes confused with the six-term Governor of Michigan, is manufactured not by Mennen but by Pharmaceuticals, Inc., makers of Serutan. Governor Williams has no stock in or connection with Williams soap.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

The football turns end over end high in the sun and it comes down between the palm trees in the big back yard. Kathy, 12, sets herself for it. She takes it as one would cradle a baby and she yells to Kelly, 10, to block for her. She runs it 15 yards before she is touched. Kelly says he took his little sister Trudy, 8, out of the play, but he couldn't get by Jean, 13.

They line up. The yard is full of shouting and the play swirls around little Willie, who is 6. He is not in the game. He has a white ball and he throws it up and misses as it comes down. He sees a little girl in her mother's old red silk dress. The little girl is trying to climb a low pine, but her feet skid on the long hem. Willie throws the ball to her and waits for her to throw it back.

The father of the five sits on the back porch, watching. His name is Rube Faloon. He is 38, and lives at 6832 S. W. 68th Street, in South Miami, Florida. He was a redhead when he had hair. He was a good sports writer when he had a paper. His job is executive secretary of the Rotary Club of Miami. He is also a part-time press agent for the Jack Tar Hotels. He could use a little good luck. Just a little.

Mrs. Faloon comes on the porch with a cup of black coffee. She plops on a summer lounge. Rube calls her Peter. She is jet-haired, slender, a swimming teacher. There is a shameless love affair going on between these two and the five children. It comes out in rough-house play, wisecracks, and sneaky pecks on the cheek.

Six years ago, Mrs. Faloon was in Doctors Hospital having little Willie. They told her it was a boy. Rube hurried to the hospital, grinning as though he had done something monumental. Dr. James Lancaster stopped him in the hall. "Rube," he said, "there is something I want to talk to you about."

They went to a room. The doctor fidgeted. "Do you know what a retarded child is like?" Rube nodded. "Sure I do. What's that got to do with it?" Dr. Lancaster sighed. "You have a mongoloid son, Rube. Now wait a minute. Before you go off the deep end, let me call another doctor to have a look."

The grin died. It was a long time coming back. The second doctor studied the baby boy. He saw the stubby fingers; two toes on each foot were fused. The lines on the infant's palms ran the wrong way.

The eyes were slanted. The tongue was a little thick for the mouth.

It was Rube's job to tell Peter. She was sitting up in bed behind a tray of ham and eggs. He wanted to start by saying that there are a million such babies in the United States. It didn't sound right. Instead, he said: "Honey, we have a problem." She set the fork down. "What problem?" He fumbled a little. The voice fought a tight throat. "Our baby is going to be a little boy — always."

Rube tried hard to be the man. He didn't make it. He barely got his arms around her and half lifted her off the bed and buried his face in her hair. Then the tears came and, for the first time, he felt helpless. After the tears came the buoyant bounce of optimism. "We can keep him, can't we?" "Oh sure." "It will work out. You'll see."

No one knows what causes a mongoloid. Some say that they have 57 chromosomes per cell, whereas normal people have 56. Some say that a sub-acute virus in the mother causes it. Most doctors admit they don't know. The Faloons took Willie home. For a while, he dragged the rest of the family downward. He needed more attention than the others. They signed him into Sunland Training Center at Gainesville when he was 4. As they left, Rube couldn't start his car to go home.

The others—Jean, who is going to be a pretty woman; Kathy, the tomboy; Kelly, who wins trophies swimming; and Trudy, who couldn't get a good schoolmark if she wrote the report cards herself—moped around the house. There was no life. Everybody missed Willie.

Rube and Peter went back to Sunland and got him. He is short and stubby and wears glasses. He beamed and gurgled at his family and they hugged him breathless. Now, they play football all around him. He gets no special attention over the others. When he gets his way in some small matter, his mother says: "Very clever, these Orientals."

A month ago, Trudy's teacher told the class to write something about the happiest day in their lives. Some wrote about vacations some wrote about sports events; some wrote about a flight in a plane. When the teacher came to Trudy's report, he glanced at it, swallowed, and looked away.

All it said was: "The day Willie came home." . . .

A Promotion For Rep. Powell

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) apparently is setting out early to prove himself worthy of the committee chairmanship he almost certainly will receive when the new Congress is organized. Majority members of the House Committee on Education and Labor have been called by Powell to a meeting on Monday to discuss strategy and plans for the new 87th Congress.

Completion of studies on new bills in advance of Congress's formal opening presumably will open the way for quick action on a variety of issues next year. The Negro pastor-politician already has predicted that within a month after the Congress convenes his committee will approve bills providing a $1.25 minimum wage and federal aid to education.

The Education-Labor chairmanship devolves on Powell by virtue of the House's controversial seniority practice. The former chairman, Rep. Graham A. Barden (D-N.C.), did not stand for re-election this year and Powell is next in line. Southern Congressmen, who in the last Congress headed 15 of the 21 standing committees of the House, prefer to swallow this bitter pill rather than breach the unwritten seniority rule.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) is reported to be standing firm against any attempt to dilute Powell's authority by splitting the present committee into two groups, one on labor, to be headed by Powell, the other on education, with Rep. Cleveland M. Bailey (D-W.Va.) as chairman. Some of the opposition to Powell was softened by the evidence of party regularity he displayed this fall in stumping through 15 states in behalf of John F. Kennedy. Another big obstacle to his accession was removed when a federal jury was unable to reach a verdict in Powell's trial on income tax evasion charges last April. It was reported that the jury stood 10-to-2 for acquittal of the Harlem Democrat.

The Wheat Hoard

Prior to the present harvest, the Government of the United States owned about 1,300,000,000 bushels of wheat. The 1960 crop increased this hoard. Altogether the surplus crops cost the taxpayer about $4,000,000,000 a year.

If there is to be a rationalization of government costs, something has to be done about farm surpluses. Whenever city persons write about agricultural problems, the farm experts contend that we do not know what we are talking about, which is an easy but meaningless answer. We do know that taxes are unconscionably high and that food prices are ridiculously high and that the purchasing value of the dollar is low.

This the city dweller does know and he is not pleased about it. In fact, one of the first problems that the Kennedy Administration will have to tackle is the deterioration of urban life, the increase of slum areas, the rise of urban juvenile crime, the high cost of urban living and the blighting of suburban areas. When the cost of food exceeds the ability of a family to live on its income, whether from earnings or charity (now euphemistically called relief), social and moral conditions in cities deteriorate.

The maintenance of farm prices contributes to the high cost of food. At the same time, the stockpiling of food serves no useful purpose except to place an increasing burden of taxes upon the necks of a people whose currency is decreasing in value.

This, then, is what the country faces. The Eisenhower Administration has made no effort to deal with this problem, much less solve it. Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson made some startling moves, but he was unsupported by his colleagues who could not stand up against the waves of strongly expressed unpopularity. In fact, although what is known as the farm vote is no longer decisive as the 1960 election established, the historic memory on the subject differs from reality.

Actually, this problem cannot be contained in the Department of Agriculture. Any solution must include the State Department which must concern itself with protests from such countries as Canada (wheat and cheese) and Denmark (butter) that are worried over our dumping large quantities of surplus foods upon world markets or to feed the hungry in Asia and Africa who cannot afford to pay our prices. It must include the Department of Commerce for identical reasons. It is no longer possible to deal with these broad problems as though they were the private domain of some official. Food is a national problem and the Treasury must have something to say about the value of our currency and the prospect of taxes.

In a word, when a country holds $4,000,000,000 of frozen crops it has so much of its liquid wealth tied up in a dead man's fist, which it cannot employ for useful purposes. President-elect Kennedy's father, Joseph, was a member of both Hoover Commissions which made a very serious attempt to find out what was wrong with a paralyzed executive branch of government that could not deal with problems that faced it and that required immediate action.

Brother Robert was a member of the staff of one of the Hoover Commissions. It is to be hoped that some of the findings and some of the conclusions are retained in the memories of these men and of Jack who, as Senator, handled some of the bills proposed for enactment. At any rate, a vast amount of material is available in these commissions which can be useful in handling these particular problems to the benefit of both the urban and the rural populations.

Poverty, in a rich country such as ours still is, can only be the product of faulty organization and bad distribution. These can be corrected by keen minds and strong wills. President Kennedy cannot fall back either on the needs of the Roosevelt Administration or the inability of the Eisenhower Administration to act. He will have to make a new agricultural program of his own, consistent with his general economic program, progressive and daring and related to the welfare of both the urban and rural populations. If he cannot do this, the big cities will be in trouble and so will Mr. Kennedy.

As the population switch has been to the big cities, this situation will have to be dealt with realistically.

Eisenhower And Kennedy Should Meet Again

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON — What knowledge could President Eisenhower possibly impart in three and a half hours to President-elect Kennedy to enable him to take over the reins of government with the least impairment of the public interest?

Under the Constitution, one man is President a few minutes before noon on January 20, and another is President a few minutes later. Yet the decision to order retaliation in case of "surprise attack" by an enemy in a nuclear age is vested in the man who happens at a particular moment to be President.

There are many decisions of a fateful nature which the new President will have to make, and it would be fine if he were not compelled to act before he had time to familiarize himself with all the nuances of national and international policy.

Ten Presidents have come and gone in the last half century as this correspondent has watched the passing scene. Some have been inadequately prepared. Others have been helped considerably by their predecessors. When there is a change of party — and this has occurred five times since the turn of the century — the transition is more difficult and likely to be more damaging than when the same party continues in power. This time—January 1961—the nation is in the midst of the most critical situation internationally that it has ever faced. Its safety is in danger. In 1913 and 1921 and 1933 and 1953, when parties changed in the White House, there was no direct threat to national security.

Though it is called a "cold war," the military forces of this country and its allies throughout the world are today on a 24-hour alert. Thus the role of the President becomes one of military decision as the commander-in-chief of all armed forces.

To aid the President, there is a constant flow of confidential information gathered by the Central Intelligence Agency and the FBI. This has been conveyed almost daily to President Eisenhower for nearly eight years. From all this, he has derived certain impressions and formulated certain conclusions. How much of this now can be transmitted by a President to the President-elect in three and a half hours of conversation? For if the President-elect really believes what he and his campaign speakers have been saying — namely, that Mr. Eisenhower was a "part-time" President or that he comes to his opinions through "staff studies" and not personal examination — then the value of such a meeting could be discounted. Maybe those statements were just "campaign oratory."

Most men like to form their own conclusions anyway after they have studied all the facts. It will take not weeks but months for the new President to gather the facts and learn at first hand the intricacies of international policy. He will depend, of course, on the new Secretary of State or the incoming Secretary of the Treasury to do much of the spade work but, in the final analysis, no President, under our present system, can in a matter of weeks learn enough to deal wisely with the controversial questions that come before him.

A new President finds himself confronted by administrative and executive tasks as well as by policy-making. Mr. Kennedy has never had any experience as the top executive of a large organization. Most of our Presidents have not had that kind of experience, though, in the case of governors elected to the office of Chief Executive, it may be said that they have become familiar with executive operations on a smaller but nevertheless analogous basis. Maybe this is the reason so few men from Congress have ever been elected to the Presidency.

Whatever else may be said about military commands and the tendency to use the staff system, the truth is that anyone who has had the highest military post in the biggest war of all history has been fully aware of the importance of getting the right kind of advice and making the right decisions. For in war there is usually no second chance in which to rectify errors or correct mistakes of judgment.

Mr. Kennedy's youth has been considered a liability, but it may prove an asset. For the job requires the energy of the young and at times the willingness of youth to take risks. The President-elect will be assuming office with many important policies hanging in the balance. That's why the readiness of President Eisenhower to transmit not only information but advice is an indication of his high-mindedness and devotions to the public interest. Indeed, there should be many such conferences as occurred on Tuesday between the incoming and outgoing President. It is the only practical way to overcome the handicap that any new Chief Executive faces as he takes office and becomes solely responsible for the safety of the nation one minute after twelve o'clock noon on January 20, 1961.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

SHERM THE FIRM — Disclosures of President-elect John F. Kennedy's ideas on White House staff organization recall the activities and operations of one of the toughest, most taciturn and hard-working men ever to occupy an office in the White House.

A former New Hampshire governor, Sherman Adams carried the title "Assistant to the President," which Kennedy has now decided to abolish. He functioned more as an "assistant President" than any of his predecessors on Presidential staffs. He, rather than Eisenhower, conducted staff meetings. He determined what the President should see and not see. He was known widely throughout the government as the man to contact for the answers, rather than the President.

During his heyday, a Washington mot with real meaning was: "What if something should happen to Adams and Eisenhower became President!"

Ike called him "Sherm the firm" in jest, but again with a real point. Sherm was adamant once he made up his mind. He was unreachable by any of the ordinary activities of government officials, legislators or private favor-seekers.

That he had to resign his office under fire of "influence" allegations growing out of his friendship with Boston industrialist Bernard Goldfine, was ironic. The many enemies he made by refusing to acede to their requests came baying at his heels like a pack of hungry wolves. Adams left, a bitter and maligned man. No one was found to fill his shoes.

Kennedy undoubtedly had the perils of such a situation in mind in deciding against an "Assistant to the President" on his staff. But he'll have one or more, in fact if not in name, performing parts of Adams' work.

More Information On Cat Scratch Fever

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

In 1951 I wrote on the first few cases of cat scratch fever that had been reported in the medical literature. Some readers were skeptical and a few branded me a cat hater.

But over the years more and more infections have been noted and the disease is now well established. A simple skin test was developed to help the physicians make the diagnosis.

Since then, we have found that almost 50 per cent of the victims had never been near a cat. The disease was acquired from splinters, thorns, or fragments of beef bone. From this we can assume that the causative virus exists not only on the cat's claws but on other objects.

The virus does no more harm to Figaro and his relatives than the fleas on the back. But in humans, the disease is generalized and involves mainly the lymph glands of the body. The cat scratch is implicated usually by hindsight because the incident usually will have been forgotten by the time fever, weakness, and aching set in. This is understandable because the glands may not swell for 6 to 60 days after the scratch.

The illness may be ushered in by a red lesion the size of a pimple or mosquito bite in the area where the virus entered the body. The glands in the neck, armpits, and groins swell and some soften and exude a thick discharge. Others remain hard and tender. Occasionally the viral infection extends into the brain, producing encephalitis.

Despite the apparent severity of the disorder and lack of a good remedy, all its victims get well. The skin test helps in diagnosis, not only because the majority have forgotten the causative incident but because cat scratch disease mimics many serious disorders like leukemia or Hodgkin's disease.

Cat scratch fever is best avoided by careful handling of cats, especially when they are carried on the shoulder, where they use their claws to hang on. Most cases occur in winter, suggesting that the causative virus is most active during this season.

WEATHER CHANGES

F. R. writes: Every time the weather changes I get pain in my forehead over the left eye. Would you know why?

REPLY

No but there are a few possibilities. Changes in the weather may affect the sinuses or the jaw joint on that side. Arthritis of the neck is suspected if pain is referred from that area.

SHAKES ON SIGNING

M. F. writes: Whenever I have to sign my name in public, as at the bank or a voting booth, I tremble ridiculously. Can anything be done to stop this nonsense?

REPLY

A little more sophistication is in order. I'm sure they don't suspect you of forging checks or voting under false pretenses.

STRENGTH IN PALSY

Mrs. F. A. writes: Do people with parkinsonism lose their strength gradually as the disease progresses?

REPLY

Yes, but it is questionable whether this is caused by muscle fatigue or by the passing years.

GASTRIC POLYPS

M. A. writes: What is done about polyps in the stomach?

REPLY

Surgical removal is recommended even though the majority are not malignant. This is done because stomach polyps are notorious for becoming cancerous at a later date.

BATS IN THE THATCH

D. F. writes: If a bat gets into your hair, does it have to be shaved off?

REPLY

Not the bat. All that is needed is to shampoo the hair unless bitten by the bat. In the circumstances, anti-rabic shots are in order.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Charles Rice found a first edition of a children's dictionary that defined "skirts" as "outer reaches" and gave as an illustrative sentence, "Mr. Smith lives on the skirts of the town." For subsequent printings, the editors deemed it expedient to substitute a sentence with less racy overtones.

Mr. Rice also found an old English dictionary whose editors must have had a sense of humor. As an illustrative sentence using the word "damn," they offered, "Damn this dictionary."

Louis Untermeyer, one of America's cleverest — and most indefatigable — punsters listened impatiently to a recital by a derivative young composer, then dismissed him with, "Rather an American Debussybody, don't you think?"

Untermeyer also deplored a contemporary writer's heavyhanded badinage as "elephantasy" and headed his review of a Boston author's book about the nether regions, "A Yankee Doodle Dante."

Young Visitor Likes Sen. Kennedy, But Remains Unimpressed By Him

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — Michael Mahoney, age 3, grandson of Mrs. Florence Mahoney of Georgetown, D. C., paid an official call the other day on Caroline Kennedy, also age 3. He did not find Miss Kennedy receiving callers. She was taking a nap. But he did find the President-elect, his feet on a table, his ear glued to the telephone, his eyes on a TV set.

"Who are you?" asked the President-elect as the young man walked in.

"I'm Mahoney," replied the caller, who, though only 3, is a man's man.

The two men soon got down to business. They were not interested in filling a Cabinet position. They were interested in a new red automobile.

"This is how you steer," explained the President-elect.

Mr. Mahoney had never heard the word "steer" before but he was willing to be steered around the room.

"And this pedal puts you in reverse," explained the President-elect.

Again Mr. Mahoney had never heard the word "reverse," let alone putting himself into reverse. But he was glad to be put in reverse by the President-elect.

In the end, Michael did not get to see Caroline. She remained asleep. But he did have quite a time with the President-elect of the United States.

On the way home, Michael's grandfather explained the importance of the man whom he had visited, the fact that he would soon be governing the most powerful nation in the world. Michael listened carefully. Next day he said:

"I want to go see that man."

"What man?" asked his grandmother.

"That man with the automobile."

GI Families Come Home

American service wives with their families will soon begin flying home at the rate of 15,000 per month in order to stop the drain on the American dollar.

This has created so many hardship cases that the armed services have decided that in some instances it is better to transfer husbands back to the United States than to separate husband and wife. This is because many wives have no families to go back to, would be at a loss in locating in new homes. Rather than have a soldier beset with worry over his wife and children, therefore, some GI's may be transferred back to the United States.

It is one of the most upsetting operations the services have experienced since the end of the Korean War.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department has some significant figures on the amount of U. S. dollars invested abroad, most of which compete with American products and curtail the export of American good abroad.

At the end of 1959, total U. S. direct investments abroad amounted to $30 billion, and it's estimated that by the end of 1960 they will be close to $32 billion. This is considerably more than the $18 billion in gold now in reserve in the USA. The profits on these investments run around $3.2 billion annually, of which around $1 billion will be plowed back into foreign operations.

Most American companies pay just about as high corporate taxes on their investments in Western Europe as they do in this country. But taxes in Latin America, Asia and Africa are much lower. Generally it pays to keep dollar profits abroad rather than bring them back to the United States as American GI families are now being brought back. If more dollar profits were returned, it might not be necessary to return servicemen's families.

Note—Many American companies originally were encouraged to invest abroad in order to help Europe's unfavorable balance of payments. But the rush of investments became so great in order to take advantage of cheap foreign labor that now the balance-of-payments' shoe is on the other foot. American factories abroad not only curtail American exports abroad but in some cases actually help produce goods which are shipped back to the USA.

"Soapy" No Palm-Oiler

Fifteen minutes after the appointment of Gov. Mennen "Soapy" Williams of Michigan was announced as Assistant Secretary of State for African affairs, Republicans had put out a whispering story that the reason was palm oil.

Palm oil, they said, comes from Africa, and the Mennen Soap Company, in which "Soapy" is a stockholder, buys a lot of palm oil.

I happen to be one who has sniffed out a lot of conflict-of-interest cases in other administrations, so I talked to George Mennen, an executive of the Mennen Company. I have known the Mennens for some time, partly because they were once generous enough to help raise money for "Big Brothers" through their Wednesday televised boxing nights. They are honest, conservative Republicans.

"We haven't bought any palm oil for 25 years," George Mennen replied. "Most people don't understand that we are not soap manufacturers, even if the Governor is nicknamed 'Soapy'. We don't even use any basic oil or fats. Furthermore, not one item we use is imported by ourselves. It's purchased from U. S. agents, and we don't know what country it comes from."

"Is it true that Governor Williams' mother is a Republican?" I asked.

"She's my aunt, and certainly she used to be Republican," replied George Mennen. "But I suspect she's been voitng for her son lately."

Note—Williams shaving soap, sometimes confused with the six-term Governor of Michigan, is manufactured not by Mennen but by Pharmaceuticals, Inc., makers of Serutan. Governor Williams has no stock in or connection with Williams soap.

Jim Bishop: Reporter

By Jim Bishop

The football turns end over end high in the sun and it comes down between the palm trees in the big back yard. Kathy, 12, sets herself for it. She takes it as one would cradle a baby and she yells to Kelly, 10, to block for her. She runs it 15 yards before she is touched. Kelly says he took his little sister Trudy, 8, out of the play, but he couldn't get by Jean, 13.

They line up. The yard is full of shouting and the play swirls around little Willie, who is 6. He is not in the game. He has a white ball and he throws it up and misses as it comes down. He sees a little girl in her mother's old red silk dress. The little girl is trying to climb a low pine, but her feet skid on the long hem. Willie throws the ball to her and waits for her to throw it back.

The father of the five sits on the back porch, watching. His name is Rube Faloon. He is 38, and lives at 6832 S. W. 68th Street, in South Miami, Florida. He was a redhead when he had hair. He was a good sports writer when he had a paper. His job is executive secretary of the Rotary Club of Miami. He is also a part-time press agent for the Jack Tar Hotels. He could use a little good luck. Just a little.

Mrs. Faloon comes on the porch with a cup of black coffee. She plops on a summer lounge. Rube calls her Peter. She is jet-haired, slender, a swimming teacher. There is a shameless love affair going on between these two and the five children. It comes out in rough-house play, wisecracks, and sneaky pecks on the cheek.

Six years ago, Mrs. Faloon was in Doctors Hospital having little Willie. They told her it was a boy. Rube hurried to the hospital, grinning as though he had done something monumental. Dr. James Lancaster stopped him in the hall. "Rube," he said, "there is something I want to talk to you about."

They went to a room. The doctor fidgeted. "Do you know what a retarded child is like?" Rube nodded. "Sure I do. What's that got to do with it?" Dr. Lancaster sighed. "You have a mongoloid son, Rube. Now wait a minute. Before you go off the deep end, let me call another doctor to have a look."

The grin died. It was a long time coming back. The second doctor studied the baby boy. He saw the stubby fingers; two toes on each foot were fused. The lines on the infant's palms ran the wrong way.

The eyes were slanted. The tongue was a little thick for the mouth.

It was Rube's job to tell Peter. She was sitting up in bed behind a tray of ham and eggs. He wanted to start by saying that there are a million such babies in the United States. It didn't sound right. Instead, he said: "Honey, we have a problem." She set the fork down. "What problem?" He fumbled a little. The voice fought a tight throat. "Our baby is going to be a little boy — always."

Rube tried hard to be the man. He didn't make it. He barely got his arms around her and half lifted her off the bed and buried his face in her hair. Then the tears came and, for the first time, he felt helpless. After the tears came the buoyant bounce of optimism. "We can keep him, can't we?" "Oh sure." "It will work out. You'll see."

No one knows what causes a mongoloid. Some say that they have 57 chromosomes per cell, whereas normal people have 56. Some say that a sub-acute virus in the mother causes it. Most doctors admit they don't know. The Faloons took Willie home. For a while, he dragged the rest of the family downward. He needed more attention than the others. They signed him into Sunland Training Center at Gainesville when he was 4. As they left, Rube couldn't start his car to go home.

The others—Jean, who is going to be a pretty woman; Kathy, the tomboy; Kelly, who wins trophies swimming; and Trudy, who couldn't get a good schoolmark if she wrote the report cards herself—moped around the house. There was no life. Everybody missed Willie.

Rube and Peter went back to Sunland and got him. He is short and stubby and wears glasses. He beamed and gurgled at his family and they hugged him breathless. Now, they play football all around him. He gets no special attention over the others. When he gets his way in some small matter, his mother says: "Very clever, these Orientals."

A month ago, Trudy's teacher told the class to write something about the happiest day in their lives. Some wrote about vacations some wrote about sports events; some wrote about a flight in a plane. When the teacher came to Trudy's report, he glanced at it, swallowed, and looked away.

All it said was: "The day Willie came home." . . .

Judge Harris Gives Advice In Unusual Situation

A very unusual situation has come to light concerning a prisoner at the county jail as the result of a letter he sent to Chief Judge Morgan C. Harris.

Judge Harris received a letter from Donald M. Frantz who stated he was tried September 26, 1959 and convicted on a motor law violation. Frantz also stated he was sent to the House of Correction for six months. When Frantz arrived at the state institution he was not accepted because prison authorities said the commitment papers were not filled out correctly.

Frantz said he was returned to the county jail the same day, that he had no further trial on the charges and that he is now serving the sentence for the same charge nine months later.

Frantz asked Judge Harris to review his case.

The jurist in reply stated: "You did not state all the facts pertaining to your case. I learned from the available records that you were tried before Magistrate F. Allan Weatherholt on September 28, 1959 for operating a car under the influence of intoxicants or drugs, reckless driving and fail ure to stop after striking an unattended vehicle.

"I find that on the first offense you were fined $500, on the second offense, $100 and on the third, $200. In lieu of your inability to pay these fines you were given a six-month sentence by the magistrate.

"According to the Maryland code you should have been given 90 days on the driving under the influence charge, 30 days for reckless driving and 60 days for failing to stop after an accident. This makes a total of 180 days.

"So that you will understand why the House of Correction did not accept you for commitment, the magistrate's original commitment paper was in error in stating in one place that you were to be sentenced to six months in jail and in another place to six months in the House of Correction.

"You were returned to the county jail the same day and the sheriff released you on November 17, 1959 for hospital attention and my information is that you returned to the county jail November 25, 1959.

"The record seems to indicate that on December 14, 1959 you were released by Magistrate Weatherholt for a hernia operation. The information I have is that you did not return to the county jail until after another commitment was issued by Magistrate Weatherholt on October 26, 1960, which commitment states on its face that you were committed to complete sentence.

"In your case, Magistrate Weatherholt's order directing your release was invalid, and the sheriff's action in releasing you, though in good faith, was unauthorized and illegal. It would be a travesty on justice to hold that you can escape the penalty of the law that was inflicted on you by claiming that your release was illegal.

"While your letter to me was informal, it could be treated as an application for a review under the Post Conviction Procedure Act, and I would not deny you this right. However, in order to secure such a review of your case you would have to set forth, under affidavit, all the details of your case, and you would have to make an affidavit that you had no funds to employ counsel or to pay the costs of such procedure, in which event an attorney would be appointed by the court to represent you.

"However, I have recited what facts the record indicates, and unless you have something in addition to this of a substantial nature, I believe it would be futile for you to pursue your case further."

Census Survey Slated Here

A survey will be conducted here next week by the Census Bureau to determine the number of persons who have more than one job.

The questions on secondary jobs will be asked in addition to the usual inquiries on employment and unemployment, according to Edgar L. Bryan, director of the bureau's district office in Pittsburgh.

Besides determining the number of people who take extra jobs, the questions will also secure information on the type of work done on a second job, the number of hours worked, and whether the work is done on weekends or at night.

Judge Harris Gives Advice In Unusual Situation

A very unusual situation has come to light concerning a prisoner at the county jail as the result of a letter he sent to Chief Judge Morgan C. Harris.

Judge Harris received a letter from Donald M. Frantz who stated he was tried September 26, 1959 and convicted on a motor law violation. Frantz also stated he was sent to the House of Correction for six months. When Frantz arrived at the state institution he was not accepted because prison authorities said the commitment papers were not filled out correctly.

Frantz said he was returned to the county jail the same day, that he had no further trial on the charges and that he is now serving the sentence for the same charge nine months later.

Frantz asked Judge Harris to review his case.

The jurist in reply stated: "You did not state all the facts pertaining to your case. I learned from the available records that you were tried before Magistrate F. Allan Weatherholt on September 28, 1959 for operating a car under the influence of intoxicants or drugs, reckless driving and fail ure to stop after striking an unattended vehicle.

"I find that on the first offense you were fined $500, on the second offense, $100 and on the third, $200. In lieu of your inability to pay these fines you were given a six-month sentence by the magistrate.

"According to the Maryland code you should have been given 90 days on the driving under the influence charge, 30 days for reckless driving and 60 days for failing to stop after an accident. This makes a total of 180 days.

"So that you will understand why the House of Correction did not accept you for commitment, the magistrate's original commitment paper was in error in stating in one place that you were to be sentenced to six months in jail and in another place to six months in the House of Correction.

"You were returned to the county jail the same day and the sheriff released you on November 17, 1959 for hospital attention and my information is that you returned to the county jail November 25, 1959.

"The record seems to indicate that on December 14, 1959 you were released by Magistrate Weatherholt for a hernia operation. The information I have is that you did not return to the county jail until after another commitment was issued by Magistrate Weatherholt on October 26, 1960, which commitment states on its face that you were committed to complete sentence.

"In your case, Magistrate Weatherholt's order directing your release was invalid, and the sheriff's action in releasing you, though in good faith, was unauthorized and illegal. Two Local Explorer Scouts Presented With Highest Award At Ceremonies

Scouting's highest award, Eagle Scout, was bestowed on two members of Explorer Post 17 at a joint court of honor with Boy Scout Troop 17.

Both organizations are sponsored by Kelly-Springfield Tire Company and the ceremony was held in the local plant's conference room.

James C. Warden, vice president — production for the sponsoring company who is also chairman of the finance committee of Potomac Council, was in charge of presenting Terry Bolinger and Roy Phillips the high awards.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. George Phillips, parents of Roy; Mrs. C. H. Bolinger, mother of Terry, and Robert Moyer, who stood in behalf of Terry's father.

Richard Wilkinson, post committee chairman, presided at this portion of the program and Edward Miller, of the post committee, gave a narration, "The Building Blocks of Scouting."

During the troop's court of honor, Richard Ball of the troop committee was chairman and merit badges were presented by Howrad Hartley of the troop committee.

Receiving merit badges were Robert Bittinger, Daniel Diehl, Douglas Grim, Milnor Roberts, Theodore Nave and James Taylor.

Robert Mowery presented Star Rank badges to Diehl, Grimm, Navé and Taylor.

Life Rank was bestowed by Charles Newman, council field executive, upon Robert Bittinger.

The invocation was given by Rev. H. Maunsell Richardson, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church and the opening ceremony was given by the troop.

Troop awards were handed out by Scoutmaster Kenneth Schneider and Assistant Scoutmaster Paul Diehl.

Invested as Tenderfoot Scouts were Michael Mathews and Roger Shook.

Post awards were given by Ted Fritz, advisor, and Fred Strausburg, assistant adviser. Bolinger was given an Explorer dress uniform for being selected as the outstanding Explorer of the year.

Russell Campbell, assistant advisor, was in charge of the Scout to Explorer ceremony when Milnor Roberts and Thomas Rudd advanced from the troop to the post.

Rev. Mr. Richardson presented the Explorer Post with $500 as its quarterly share of the Satellite dances which is co-sponsored by the post and the church.

"I'M out of order? YOU'RE out of order!"

Unorthodox Holiday Recipes

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI) — A hostess who estimates she's fed at least 10,000 guests in nearly 25 years of marriage favors unorthodox menus, even for the tradition-laden holidays.

Mrs. Elaine Ross likes to serve turkey at a Fourth of July cookout, pheasant for Christmas dinner and seafood crepes in a cheese and cream sauce for New Year's Eve supper instead of the traditional ham.

Her two concessions to Thanksgiving customs are turkey and pumpkin. But the latter may appear in tarts, chiffon pie or chiffon pudding, and the turkey with a fancy sauce combining cherry liqueur or brandy with sour cherries.

In an interview, Mrs. Ross spoke up for more adventurous meal planning.

"Thirty years ago a company dinner meant one of four entrees," she said. "Roast beef or steak — usually with french fried potatoes and peas; or turkey or squab, with the choice depending partly on the hostess' budget. More recently, we've gone through a string beans almondine phase."

Mrs. Ross, a cookbook author and consultant to food manufacturers, deplores the idea that entertaining and luxury are synonymous. She maintains that corned beef and cabbage can be as elegant as more expensive food. She has tested this theory successfully with guests at her Scarsdale, N.Y., home, with the unqualified approval of her insurance broker husband, Cornelius.

(The Ross house, nearly 200 years old, bears a distinction appropriate to a food expert's ownership. A historical plaque notes that George Washington lunched there on his way to White Plains, N.Y., in October, 1775. It does not say what he was served.)

A brief excursion into teaching with her business partner, Mrs. Juliette Elkon, led Mrs. Ross to another theory: most American women are afraid to use off-beat menus for entertaining, and are timid about planning even routine menus. To help fill this gap, the partners planned a combination calendar and date book with recipes. The idea ended up as a cookbook, "Menus for Entertaining" (Hastings House), just published.

Hearty Fare — Rice, Beef

Cold days ahead call for stick-to-the rib fare. Try this idea as a starter!

Green Beans and Leftover Beef In Rice Ring

1 package (9 ounces) quick-frozen French style green beans
Vegetable liquid and beef broth to equal 2 cups*
1½ cups milk
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups rice
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup slivered cooked leftover roast beef
6 tablespoons butter
¾ cup flour
Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon curry powder
*1 bouillon cube dissolved in boiling water may be used for beef broth.

Cook beans as directed on package. Drain, measuring liquid. Add enough beef broth to equal 2 cups.

Bring milk, 1 tablespoon butter, and the salt to a boil in saucepan. Stir in packaged pre-cooked rice. Cover, remove from heat, and let stand 10 minutes. Fluff with a fork. Pack into a well-greased 1-quart ring mold. Let stand 5 minutes before unmolding. Then turn out onto a warmed serving platter.

Meanwhile, saute onion and beef in remaining butter. Add flour, pepper, and curry powder; blend. Gradually, stir in vegetable and heat thoroughly. Spoon into center of rice ring. Makes 4 to liquid and broth. Cook and stir until thickened. Add the beans 6 servings.

Many New Cookbooks On Market For Christmas

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI)—Specialization in the cookbook world has reached the stage where authors are raiding the recipe files of ministers' and coaches' wives.

One new work with a collection of recipes from Protestant minister's wives is called "The Hospitality Cookbook" (Dutton), written by Elizabeth Bonnells McCuaig. It contains one recipe that sounds more at home in a mystery novel. But "broken glass torte" is merely a lethal-sounding name for a dessert made with multi-colored gelatin cubes.

Wives of football coaches are represented with "Gridiron Cookery" (McKay), edited by Frances S. Daugherty and Aileen C. Brothers. The recipes are favorites with families of college and professional grid coaches. They were chosen by cooks who sometimes must cope with up to 50 hungry mouths on short notice.

Other new cookbooks include:

— "The Rolling Kitchen" (Houghton Mifflin) by Ruth Patton Totten, an Army wife. It contains international recipes and family favorites, plus her mother's formula for learning ship's galley cookery. Mrs. Totten writes that Mrs. George S. Patton, Jr., wife of the famed World War II general, simulated the rolling motion of the sea by standing on a board balanced on a round can.

—"Scheherazade Cooks!" (Channel Press) by Wadeeha Atiyeh combines coy tales of the legendary charmer with practical recipes for Near Eastern food adapted to American kitchens. It also tells how to make your own yogurt.

—Hamburger every day in the year isn't such an appalling thought if you consult "365 Ways to Cook Hamburger" (Doubleday). Many recipes stem from author Doyne Nickerson's experience in depression days when hamburger sold for 8½ cents a pound.

—Dazzling illustrations for James Beard's "Treasury of Outdoor Cooking" (Golden Press), and Beverly Pepper's "See Rome and Eat" (Doubleday), almost overshadow the excellent recipes. The Pepper book is also a guide to 50 fine Roman restaurants, where chefs were persuaded to part with some of their usually-secret recipes.

— "The Sunset Cook Book" (Lane), another illustrated beauty, is not for purists who say classic recipes should be followed to the letter. Many of its recipes are interesting adaptations by Western cooks using the plentiful fresh produce and seafood of their area.

—For reading fun, try "Food for the Rich" (Barnes) by Paul Reboux and "The I Hate to Cook Book" (Harcourt, Brace) by Peg Bracken. Frenchman Reboux' tongue-in-cheek recommendations include bread pressed with a hot iron, blue-tinted macaroni for serving a poetess, and chicken washed with soap and water to make it white.

Among Miss Bracken's simple recipes and tart observations is a sound idea even for cooks who like their daily lot. She points out that inexpensive leftovers usually are self-perpetuating when used as an ingredient, while expensive foods—such as wild rice and out-of-season strawberries — are rarely left over.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Glue stains in children's clothing respond well to a soaking in warm water before laundry.

Plan roasting time so the holiday turkey or other fowl will be done 20 to 30 minutes before serving. This rest period helps make the meat juicy and carving easy. It also allows time to make the gravy.

To make well-filled and uniform pin-wheel rolls, roll dough into a long narrow rectagle ¼ inch thick and spread with filling; roll up lengthwise, cut in 1-inch slices and place in buttered muffin tins.

Your children will be delighted with a gelatin dessert served in cubes. To prepare, pour gelatin about 1-inch deep in a large pan and let set; cut into cubes; serve in dessert glasses with whipped and sweetened evaporated milk.

She maintains that corned beef and cabbage can be as elegant as more expensive food. She has tested this theory successfully with guests at her Scarsdale, N.Y., home, with the unqualified approval of her insurance broker husband, Cornelius.

(The Ross house, nearly 200 years old, bears a distinction appropriate to a food expert's ownership. A historical plaque notes that George Washington lunched there on his way to White Plains, N.Y., in October, 1775. It does not say what he was served.)

A brief excursion into teaching with her business partner, Mrs. Juliette Elkon, led Mrs. Ross to another theory: most American women are afraid to use off-beat menus for entertaining, and are timid about planning even routine menus. To help fill this gap, the partners planned a combination calendar and date book with recipes. The idea ended up as a cookbook, "Menus for Entertaining" (Hastings House), just published.

Hearty Fare — Rice, Beef

Cold days ahead call for stick-to-the rib fare. Try this idea as a starter!

Green Beans and Leftover Beef In Rice Ring

1 package (9 ounces) quick-frozen French style green beans
Vegetable liquid and beef broth to equal 2 cups*
1½ cups milk
1 taoblespoon butter
½ teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups rice
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup slivered cooked leftover roast beef
6 tablespoons butter
¾ cup flour
Dash of pepper
1 teaspoon curry powder
*1 bouilion cube dissolved in boiling water may be used for beef broth.

Cook beans as directed on package. Drain, measuring liquid. Add enough beef broth to equal 2 cups.

Bring milk, 1 tablespoon butter, and the salt to a boil in saucepan. Stir in packaged pre-cooked rice. Cover, remove from heat, and let stand 10 minutes. Fluff with a fork. Pack into a well-greased 1-quart ring mold. Let stand 5 minutes before unmolding. Then turn out onto a warmed serving platter.

Meanwhile, saute onion and beef in remaining butter. Add flour, pepper, and curry powder; blend. Gradually, stir in vegetable and heat thoroughly. Spoon into center of rice ring. Makes 4 to liquid and broth. Cook and stir until thickened. Add the beans 6 servings.

Many New Cookbooks On Market For Christmas

By JEANNE LESEM

NEW YORK (UPI)—Specialization in the cookbook world has reached the stage where authors are raiding the recipe files of ministers' and coaches' wives.

One new work with a collection of recipes from Protestant minister's wives is called "The Hospitality Cookbook" (Dutton), written by Elizabeth Bonnells McCuaig. It contains one recipe that sounds more at home in a mystery novel. But "broken glass torte" is merely a lethal-sounding name for a dessert made with multi-colored gelatin cubes.

Wives of football coaches are represented with "Gridiron Cookery" (McKay), edited by Frances S. Daugherty and Aileen C. Brothers. The recipes are favorites with families of college and professional grid coaches. They were chosen by cooks who sometimes must cope with up to 50 hungry mouths on short notice.

Other new cookbooks include:

— "The Rolling Kitchen" (Houghton Mifflin) by Ruth Patton Totten, an Army wife. It contains international recipes and family favorites, plus her mother's formula for learning ship's galley cookery. Mrs. Totten writes that Mrs. George S. Patton, Jr., wife of the famed World War II general, simulated the rolling motion of the sea by standing on a board balanced on a round can.

—"Scheherazade Cooks!" (Channel Press) by Wadeeha Atiyeh combines coy tales of the legendary charmer with practical recipes for Near Eastern food adapted to American kitchens. It also tells how to make your own yogurt.

—Hamburger every day in the year isn't such an appalling thought if you consult "365 Ways to Cook Hamburger" (Doubleday). Many recipes stem from author Doyne Nickerson's experience in depression days when hamburger sold for 8½ cents a pound.

—Dazzling illustrations for James Beard's "Treasury of Outdoor Cooking" (Golden Press), and Beverly Pepper's "See Rome and Eat" (Doubleday), almost overshadow the excellent recipes. The Pepper book is also a guide to 50 fine Roman restaurants, where chefs were persuaded to part with some of their usually-secret recipes.

— "The Sunset Cook Book" (Lane), another illustrated beauty, is not for purists who say classic recipes should be followed to the letter. Many of its recipes are interesting adaptations by Western cooks using the plentiful fresh produce and seafood of their area.

—For reading fun, try "Food for the Rich" (Barnes) by Paul Reboux and "The I Hate to Cook Book" (Harcourt, Brace) by Peg Bracken. Frenchman Reboux' tongue-in-cheek recommendations include bread pressed with a hot iron, blue-tinted macaroni for serving a poetess, and chicken washed with soap and water to make it white.

Among Miss Bracken's simple recipes and tart observations is a sound idea even for cooks who like their daily lot. She points out that inexpensive leftovers usually are self-perpetuating when used as an ingredient, while expensive foods—such as wild rice and out-of-season strawberries — are rarely left over.

WIFE PRESERVERS

Glue stains in children's clothing respond well to a soaking in warm water before laundry.

Plan roasting time so the holiday turkey or other fowl will be done 20 to 30 minutes before serving. This rest period helps make the meat juicy and carving easy. It also allows time to make the gravy.

To make well-filled and uniform pin-wheel rolls, roll dough into a long narrow rectagle ¼ inch thick and spread with filling; roll up lengthwise, cut in 1-inch slices and place in buttered muffin tins.

Your children will be delighted with a gelatin dessert served in cubes. To prepare, pour gelatin about 1-inch deep in a large pan and let set; cut into cubes; serve in dessert glasses with whipped and sweetened evaporated milk.

Almond-Herb Stuffing

Roast chicken or turkey, Almond-Herb Stuffing and cranberry relish in fluted orange cups head the menu for a memorable holiday dinner. This distinctive stuffing combines slivered almonds and carefully chosen herbs —savory, tarragon and thyme. The almonds add crisp contrast and tantalizing flavor to the stuffing.

If you wish, prepare Almond-Herb Stuffing a day in advance, but do not stuff your turkey or chicken until just before baking time. The stuffing may also be baked in a covered casserole if you prefer.

Almond-Herb Stuffing

- 2 quarts soft enriched bread cubes
- 1 cup slivered blanched almonds
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon thyme
- ½ teaspoon tarragon
- ¼ teaspoon savory
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ⅓ cup butter or margarine
- ¾ cup minced onion
- 2 cups warm chicken broth*
- 1 5-to-6-pound roasting chicken (or small turkey)

Empty bread cubes into large bowl. Add almonds and seasonings. Melt butter or margarine in saucepan. Add onion and cook about 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Pour onion mixture and broth over bread cubes. Toss lightly, mixing thoroughly, until bread is well moistened.

How To Stuff And Roast

Wash chicken inside and outside. Dry well. Season inside with salt. Fill neck cavity with stuffing. Fasten neck skin securely to back with skewers. Stuff body cavity well, but do not pack. Close opening with skewers and then lace shut with cord. Tie drumsticks to tail. Brush entire chicken with fat. Place on rack in shallow pan and cover loosely with aluminum foil or cheese cloth dipped in melted fat. Roast in a slow oven (325° F.) 3 to 4 hours, or until internal temperature is 190° F. If using foil, remove during last 20 minutes so chicken can brown. Any reamining stuffing may be baked in a covered casserole for 35 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 to 20 minutes longer. (Or if desired, bake stuffing separately in buttered 1½-quart casserole. Cover and bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 35 minutes. Uncover and bake 15 minutes longer.)

Makes 6 servings.

*You may use two chicken bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 cups boiling water.

Paste a large sturdy envelope in the back of your favorite cook book. Put in new untried recipes until you have time to try them and see if you want to put them in your permanent file.

Entertaining is fun and the livin' is easy. Drain the olive oil from a can of sardines; mash sardines and combine with 2 tablespoons mayonnaise. Lightly butter oblong strips of toast and spread sardine mixture over each. Sprinkle with Worcestershire sauce and garnish with sprig of parsley. No fuss, no bother.

In case you clipped the recipe for "Easy No-Bake Fruit Cake" from the food pages of The Cumberland News last Friday, there's a mistake in it.

The recipe calls for 6 cups of miniature marshmallows. It should be 2 cups.

In the Cape Cod area of Massachusetts, where more than half of America's cranberries are grown, you're apt to hear this dinner-table request: "Please pass the cranberry sass." The "sass" isn't a New England pronunciation of "sauce." It's a carryover from "sassamanesh," the Indian name for cranberries.

Cookies, Milk For Supper

Holiday left-overs make a delicious luncheon or supper, especially with homemade cookies and milk for dessert. We suggest Lemon Chip Drop Cookies—filled with mincemeat for added flavor—to sustain the pleasant holiday mood.

Lemon Chip Drop Cookies

- 2½ cups sifted flour
- ¾ teaspoon double-acting baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ½ teaspoon allspice
- ¾ cup butter or margarine
- 1½ cups firmly packed dark brown sugar
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 cup prepared mincemeat
- ¾ cup coarsely chopped nuts
- 1 cup (6-ounce package) lemon chips

Measure sifted flour, add baking powder, salt, soda, and allspice and sift together. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Add half of the flour mixture and beat until smooth. Then add mincemeat. Mix in remaining flour mixture and beat until smooth. Fold in nuts and chips.

Drop by teaspoonfuls, 2 inches apart, onto lightly greased baking sheets and bake in a moderate oven (375°F.) for 12 to 15 minutes. To store, keep in tightly covered container. Makes about 5½ dozen cookies.

Table Magic-Glazed Duck

The savory aroma of roast duckling brings to mind elegant feasts. But if you've always reserved these festive birds for guests, resolve right now to surprise and delight your own family with delicious duckling. During this season of good eating the supply of Long Island Duckling is ample and the price moderate.

Basic equipment needed is a shallow roasting pan with the rack level with, or higher than, the top of the pan. The range broiler pan with rack in place is excellent. A slow oven temperature, 325°F, is recommended. In this recipe a special glaze is added near the end of roasting. The platter is garnished with broiled orange slices with cranberry atop.

Orange-Glazed Roast Duckling

- 1 Long Island Duckling, 4 to 5 pounds
- 1 pkg. stuffing mix (8 oz.)
- ½ cup slivered almonds
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- ¼ cup orange marmalade

Remove giblets and neck from duckling. Wash, drain and pat dry. Prepare stuffing as package label directs. Saute almonds in the butter or margarine and add to stuffing. Trussing is simple! Fill neck cavity with stuffing. Fasten neck skin to back with skewer. Fill body cavity lightly with stuffing. Loop a cord around leg ends and bring together; tie. Place on rack in roasting pan and roast at 325°F about 2½ to 3 hours. About 30 minutes before roasting time is up, drain off drippings. Increase oven temperature to 400°F. Spread orange marmalade over duckling and continue roasting until nicely browned and glazed, 15 to 30 minutes. Duckling is done when drumstick meat is soft when pressed between protected fingers. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Simmer giblets until tender, 1½ to 2 hours. Add liver the last 15 minutes of cooking. Use giblets and giblet broth for gravy or add to casseroles.

Lions Launch Fund Drive To Aid Family Which Lost All Possessions In Fire

$1,000 Sought For Irvin Ours Of Flats

MOOREFIELD, W. Va.—The Moorefield Lions Club launched a drive for $1000 for Irvin Ours and his family and contributed $100 from the club treasury to start the drive.

A disaster committee composed of Don Baker, chairman and members C. R. Powers, E. B. Thrush, Bill Clark and Guy Lang made plans for immediate solicitation of funds. Ours, a hard working farmer in the Flats section and the father of a family with ten children, lost his barn, all his farm tools, his tractor, power saw and all his equipment in a fire early Sunday morning.

Roy Hamilton, president of the civic group, stated that all funds raised by Lions Club activities are used for charitable purposes and that the Ours case is certainly a worthy case. He also pointed out that Mr. Ours had not requested or solicited help.

In addition to the donation from the club treasury, funds were donated from individual members of the Lions Club at the Monday night meeting at Hotel McNeill. It was hoped that funds could be raised to reestablish the Ours family with the means of earning a living.

Wendell Hester, former radio announcer and racounteur, entertained the group with a choice selection from his collection of stories. Hester, also chairman of the Christmas basket distribution activity, coordinated for the community by the Lions Club, announced that plans are near completion and the collection of food, clothing and cash would be made next week. Hester said that the Go Getters 4-H Club will pack the baskets for this year's distribution to be made shortly before Christmas.

Selection of Martinsburg for the Civil Aeronautics Board hearing and the tentative date of Feb. 27 were agreed on Wednesday at a pre-hearing conference.

A conference was attended by Martinsburg city officials, airline attorneys and CAB examiner Leslie G. Donahue.

Mayor C. Leslie Golliday said he could definitely promise the Martinsburg City Council chambers for the hearing whenever the date is definitely set.

The city wants air service to Charleston and to Pittsburgh mainly Golliday told a reporter the city wants adequate service of one or more flights daily in each of these directions.

The city now has no regularly scheduled service, although city officials told the examiner the airport there is capable of handling such flights and is now being manned 24 hours a day for other air use.

The Martinsburg's bid for air service is tied in indirectly with a pending decision by the board on petitions for reconsideration in the Great Lakes local service case.

The decision by the board would affect the Martinsburg case in the matter of which airline would have routes extending over or near that city.

The examiner set 30 days after the decision in that case, which probably will come by Dec. 27, for the filing of exhibits and 30 days after that for the start of the hearing.

C. Steve Hanifin, director of the West Virginia State Aeronautics Commission, told the examiner his commission wishes to intervene in the case. The examiner suggested the commission file a petition to become a party.

Martinsburg has applied for service from Piedmont Airlines.

Others attending the conference included Burr L. Porterfield Jr., chairman of the aviation committee, Berkeley County Chamber of Commerce, and John C. Potts, city and airport engineer of Martinsburg.

Officials View Site Of Frostburg Sanitary Fill

The group above shown investigating the sanitary land fill begun by the City of Frostburg this week are dwarfed by the large excavation left by a strip mining operation that will be used for garbage disposal. At the right stands Walter Patterson, Allegany County Sanitarian; William Preston, Street Commissioner of Frostburg; Frank Powers, Chief of the Maryland Bureau of Mines; Edward Thomas, contractor in charge of the land fill and Dr. Ton Von Strien, head of the Allegany Department of Health. Dr. Von Strien is explaining to the group that regulations call for all of the garbage and refuse collected from the City of Frostburg in one week to be leveled off once a week, packed tightly with a bulldozer and covered with an 18-inch covering of dirt, which in this case will be taken from the large piles at the rear of the group. This method of garbage and trash disposal meets with all public health regulations, removes odors and does away with the rat problem as it destroys any that might be in the refuse each week. The new land fill is located off Midlothian Road at the southerly city limits.

Bad Weather Route Adopted In Section At Westernport; Extra Policemen Hired

WESTERNPORT — Residents on Philos Avenue between Main Street and Howard Street, during slippery weather, will be permitted to go down the hill during that period only. All other motorists coming down town will travel the same way they have been traveling down Howard Street. Council adopted the policy this week.

Louis Nasser asked the Mayor and Council at their regular meeting to write the Western Maryland Railway Company to permit him to make a crossing in the vicinity of the First Baptist Church. There is already a crossing below that point but is at a steep grade.

Mayor Ray L. Wilt stated the Council would examine the site before making any decision.

Mrs. John Cheshire, Front Street, asked for an adjustment in her water bill which was granted.

John A. Johnston was appointed extra police officer.

Patrolman David Wright, representing the police force asked that the night shift officers on Saturday come to work at 5 p. m. instead of 3:30. The request was granted. Patrolman Wright explained they do not have school traffic on Saturday as they do other week days. Council also granted his request to purchase fur caps for winter.

Council ordered two retread winter tires for the police cruiser.

A Christmas tree was purchased from Mrs. Marue DuBois, Cromer Street, L. C. Lambert, police commissioner, reported. It will be placed at the intersection of Church and Main Streets.

Lions Launch Fund Drive To Aid Family Which Lost All Possessions In Fire

$1,000 Sought For Irvin Ours Of Flats

MOOREFIELD, W. Va.—The Moorefield Lions Club launched a drive for $1000 for Irvin Ours and his family and contributed $100 from the club treasury to start the drive.

A disaster committee composed of Don Baker, chairman and members C. R. Powers, E. B. Thrush, Bill Clark and Guy Lang made plans for immediate solicitation of funds. Ours, a hard working farmer in the Flats section and the father of a family with ten children, lost his barn, all his farm tools, his tractor, power saw and all his equipment in a fire early Sunday morning.

Roy Hamilton, president of the civic group, stated that all funds raised by Lions Club activities are used for charitable purposes and that the Ours case is certainly a worthy case. He also pointed out that Mr. Ours had not requested or solicited help.

In addition to the donation from the club treasury, funds were donated from individual members of the Lions Club at the Monday night meeting at Hotel McNeill. It was hoped that funds could be raised to reestablish the Ours family with the means of earning a living.

Wendell Hester, former radio announcer and racounteur, entertained the group with a choice selection from his collection of stories. Hester, also chairman of the Christmas basket distribution activity, coordinated for the community by the Lions Club, announced that plans are near completion and the collection of food, clothing and cash would be made next week. Hester said that the Go Getters 4-H Club will pack the baskets for this year's distribution to be made shortly before Christmas.

President Eisenhower Expresses Concern Over Nation's High Unemployment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower was described Thursday as concerned over the nation's high unemployment rate, which at present is above 6 per cent of the labor force.

But he also was said to expect the economy to pick up next year despite the current decline which some economists have called a mild recession.

The President's views were relayed to reporters by Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R - Mo., who gave him a report on hearings being conducted by the Senate - House Economic Committee into current business conditions.

Curtis, ranking Republican on the committee, said Eisenhower was concerned about the fall off in gross national product in recent months.

The President also felt that the present situation could not be described precisely by such familiar terms as slump, recession or business downturn, Curtis said.

Curtis said he personally felt the economy is "quite solid." But he declined to quarrel with economists who said the nation is undergoing its mildest recession since World War II.

Curtis said the President generally shared his views, and agreed that an improvement would be forthcoming. Curtis cited a rise in personal income and an increase in savings as favorable economic indicators.

Eisenhower, he said, also was concerned about the impact on the economy of shifts in military buying, such as the changeover from aircraft to missiles.

The unemployment rate was discussed during Thursday's hearings of the Senate - House Economic Committee, which is headed by Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill.

Peter Henle, assistant research director of the AFL-CIO, told the committee there was "little indication that the unemployment picture will improve over the next few months."

He said that if present trends continue, the seasonally adjusted rate of unemployment will increase from 6.4 to 7 per cent by February. Unemployment jumped to 6.4 in October, when it should have gone down.

The evening of June 23 is a holiday for Norsemen, set aside to welcome the warmth of summer with bonfires. It is known as St. John's Eve or as Mid-Summer Eve.

Program Extended

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The State Board of Education added Harrison and Monroe Counties Thursday to a list in which training for new jobs is being offered unemployed workers. The program, set up under the State Temporary Economic Program, now covers 32 counties.

The Harvard university library is the oldest such library in the United States.

President Eisenhower Expresses Concern Over Nation's High Unemployment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower was described Thursday as concerned over the nation's high unemployment rate, which at present is above 6 per cent of the labor force.

But he also was said to expect the economy to pick up next year despite the current decline which some economists have called a mild recession.

The President's views were relayed to reporters by Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R - Mo., who gave him a report on hearings being conducted by the Senate - House Economic Committee into current business conditions.

Curtis, ranking Republican on the committee, said Eisenhower was concerned about the fall off in gross national product in recent months.

The President also felt that the present situation could not be described precisely by such familiar terms as slump, recession or business downturn, Curtis said.

Curtis said he personally felt the economy is "quite solid." But he declined to quarrel with economists who said the nation is undergoing its mildest recession since World War II.

Curtis said the President generally shared his views, and agreed that an improvement would be forthcoming. Curtis cited a rise in personal income and an increase in savings as favorable economic indicators.

Eisenhower, he said, also was concerned about the impact on the economy of shifts in military buying, such as the changeover from aircraft to missiles.

The unemployment rate was discussed during Thursday's hearings of the Senate - House Economic Committee, which is headed by Sen. Paul Douglas, D-Ill.

Peter Henle, assistant research director of the AFL-CIO, told the committee there was "little indication that the unemployment picture will improve over the next few months."

He said that if present trends continue, the seasonally adjusted rate of unemployment will increase from 6.4 to 7 per cent by February. Unemployment jumped to 6.4 in October, when it should have gone down.

Program Extended

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The State Board of Education added Harrison and Monroe Counties Thursday to a list in which training for new jobs is being offered unemployed workers. The program, set up under the State Temporary Economic Program, now covers 32 counties.

The Harvard university library is the oldest such library in the United States.

Huge Expansion Plan Being Proposed For Nine West Virginia State Colleges

ATHENS, W. Va. (UPI) — A $32.7 million program of new buildings and additional land for the nine state colleges was proposed Wednesday by the West Virginia Council of State College presidents to meet present needs at the institutions.

President Joseph F. Marsh of Concord, council president, said such an expenditure now would eliminate the 10-15 year backlog of projects at the various colleges.

"This represents present needs and not future projections," Marsh said.

The program was worked out by the colleges with a notice that the colleges were able to self-finance $5,050,000 of the total through loans on revenue - producing projects, but $27,671,000 would have to be furnished through state funds or other sources.

A survey of the needs also showed the present rate of financing buildings through the capital improvement fund — established by the legislature through increased student registration fees — is grossly inadequate. Marsh said at the present level it would take 27 years to meet the present needs.

The Council of Presidents states that additional money is necessary and suggested "perhaps a bond issue serviced by the annual income received from both the current registration fee plus tuition fees."

The college presidents said in the survey they felt an increased federal funds for college buildings would be forthcoming and likely on a matching basis.

The budget requests for the nine colleges for the next fiscal year total $10.5 million, some $2.5 million above current appropriations. The new money is channeled into personal services, current expenses, repairs and alterations and equipment.

W. Va. Board Of Public Works Recommends Budget Increase

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— The State Board of Public Works completed preliminary work Thursday on the 1961-62 West Virginia budget document and recommended an increase of $476,840 over the $114,320,749 recommended by State Budget Director Henry L. Ash.

Secretary of State Joe Burdett, who presided in the absence of Gov. Cecil H. Underwood, said the board planned to recommend an additional $164,063 for another 13 agencies following conferences with Ash on how 1961-62 revenue estimates could be raised.

The biggest increase approved Thursday was for West Virginia. The board recommended the current $8,357,662 general revenue budget be raised by $347,000 to operate the university's new Evansdale agricultural and engineering campus.

Ash had based his budget recommendations on his estimate that 1961-62 revenues would be $114,460,000. That would leave a surplus of $86,562 at the end of the next fiscal year, meaning his revenue estimates would have to be raised by some $519,000 in order to present the 1961 legislature with a balanced budget.

Other budget increases were recommended for the State Labor Department, Marshall College, the state auditor's office, Potomac State College, the treasurer's office and the State Sinking Fund. These included:

W. Va. Schools Need $20 Million More Next Year

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— West Virginia needs to pour $20 million a year more into school teachers' salaries to bring them up to the average of five neighboring states, the State Education Association said Thursday.

Even if this were done, said the teacher organization, the average would be lower than the pay of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Ohio teachers.

The association said the average annual pay of border states is $4,965 compared to West Virginia's $3,825. Maryland is tops with $5,655 and Virginia lowest among the "neighbors" with $4,150.

The WVEA said in a report that 16 West Virginia counties pay only the state minimum salary. One of these is Wirt, the only county to cut back salaries this year. Thirteen others raised salaries, led by Boone with hikes of $540 and $585 respectively for bachelor and master degree holders.

Named Vice President

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— Joseph C. Jefferds, Charleston, was elected vice president of the State Board of Education Thursday. He succeeds Dr. John H. Murry of Jenkinjones, McDowell County, who recently resigned.

The association said the average annual pay of border states is $4,965 compared to West Virginia's $3,825. Maryland is tops with $5,655 and Virginia lowest among the "neighbors" with $4,150.

The WVEA said in a report that 16 West Virginia counties pay only the state minimum salary. One of these is Wirt, the only county to cut back salaries this year. Thirteen others raised salaries, led by Boone with hikes of $540 and $585 respectively for bachelor and master degree holders.

Need Is Acute For More PSC Dormitories

KEYSER — Potomac State College has an "acute" need for more dormitories, according to President E. E. Church, who is seeking approval of a $500,000 budget from the State Board of Public Works.

Church pointed out the need at a meeting Monday in Charleston.

President Elvis Stahr of West Virginia University told the board that "explosions of technology increase the needs of West Virginia for higher development of trained brainpower."

Pleading for a $4 million 1961-62 budget increase to a total of $12.3 million, Stahr said.

"This progress increases the need for greater financial support of the University."

However, State Finance Director Henry Ash recommended an increase of only $45,000 for WVU in the next fiscal year, or some $8.4 million.

Ash also told the board that West Virginia's nine state-supported colleges seek 1961-62 budget proposals totaling $10.5 million, or $2.6 million over their current fiscal year allocations.

However, in his own recommendations for the colleges, Ash had no increases for the institutions.

The requests of the nine state colleges, compared with Ash's recommendations, included:

Marshall $2.9 million, $2.3 million; Fairmont 953,750, 783,860; Glenville 766,209, 536,080; West Liberty 765,317, 560,980; Shepherd 637,866, 531,770; Conord 1.5 million, 839,400; Tech 1.1 million, 730,780; W. Va. State 1.5 million, 1.2 million; Bluefield 524,952, 454,625.

West Virginians Facing Income Tax Next Year

Additional Revenue Is Vital Need

By J. RICHARD TOREN

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—It's far from being as sure as the proverbial death and taxes, but there is a very good chance that West Virginians will be paying a state income tax starting next year.

Times have definitely changed since the legislature gave short shrift to recommendations for an income tax by both Gov. Cecil H. Underwood and his predecessor, Gov. William C. Marland.

The new factor that will probably tip the scales in favor of the income tax is the recommendation it got this week from the prestigious State Tax Study Commission.

While the 15-member commission, representing business and industry as well as labor unions and other groups, did not suggest outright that such a tax should be imposed, it did make the first choice if the Legislature decides more state revenue is needed.

And the commission as much as said that more revenue is needed, in this manner:

"Our expenditures for education and highways as compared with other states leave little doubt that additional expenditures will be necessary to improve these facilities.

"In fact, West Virginia's need for improving our highways and educational facilities is probably the prime requisite to economic growth and for the attraction of industry."

Service "Low"

At the same time, the commission noted that West Virginia's state and local tax burden "is below the national average" and that the state has a "low ranking in governmental expenditures and services."

Gov.-elect W. W. Barron has indicated on many occasions that he will pay close attention to recommendations of the Tax Study Commission.

Reports from the Statehouse indicate that he may present to the legislature next month a program that will cost $15 to $17 million more than can be financed from present tax sources.

That kind of money can not easily be raised by further tinkering with the present state tax structure, as recent Legislatures have done when pressed for added state income. This also points to the probability that a new source of money such as an income tax might be tried.

Pointing in the same direction is the fact that an income tax has fairly solid backing from labor union groups in West Virginia, particularly the State Labor Federation, AFL-CIO.

Back in 1955 Marland proposed a state income levy based on a percentage of the taxpayer's federal income tax. Two main arguments were used to defeat it in the House of Delegates, that high federal rates had pre-empted the field, and that the proposed low-rate bill would be an entering wedge for later increases.

Had Strong Support

Three years later, Republican Gov. Underwood suggested that the lawmakers consider raising $15 million for schools through a 1 per cent tax on gross income above $2,000, but got nowhere with the proposal.

Barron, of course, is not committed to it—or to any other revenue source — but he has spoken in terms of programs that require more money then is now available, and may well find no other way to turn.

If the 1961 Legislature imposes an income tax, it will be returning to a source used by West Virginia for 10 years ending in 1943, and now used at the state and-or municipal level by all surrounding states.

The previous tax was based on 1 per cent of gross income from 1933 to 1935, and on net income at various rates from the latter year until its repeal in 1943. The most it ever yielded was $2,473,742 in 1942, when the rate ranged from 1 per cent on the first $1,000 of income after deduction, to 6 per cent on amounts over $6,000.

The State Tax Study Commission says West Virginia can now raise $2.5 million for each 1 per cent levy on the taxpayers' federal income tax payments, or, for example, $15 million through a 6 per cent tax.

Yule Tree Ceremony Scheduled

FROSTBURG — Plans for the annual community Christmas tree lighting ceremony Sunday at 6 p. m. at St. Paul's Lutheran Church are nearing completion, according to Miss Estelle Williams, chairman of the Music Study Group of the Frostburg-Georges Creek Branch of the AAUW.

Miss Williams said a large white pine tree was secured by Farrady Post 24, American Legion, under the chairmanship of Paul Stewart, Earl Miller and Ronald Hess in cooperation with the Kaiser Refractories and Chemicals Division, Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation, at Allegany. The company, which has clay stripping operations at Ohiopyle, Pa., cut the tree and brought it to Frostburg on a trailor-truck and presented it to the American Legion committee.

The Potomac Edison Company will erect the tree tomorrow morning after which Legion members will decorate the evergreen.

Mayor Joseph James will extend greetings of the city at the ceremony and Rev. E. M. Goetschius, pastor of First Presbyterian Church will offer the invocation. The Arion Band will present several selections, followed by the Christmas message by Mayor James. The Beall High School Chorus, under the direction of Miss Mary Robb, will sing "O Come, Come Emmanuel," "The First Noel" and the "Hallelujah Chorus." A carol sing will then be directed by Arthur Thomas, choir leader at First Methodist Church. Benediction will be in charge of Rev. Kenneth Morelock.

Boy Scout troops and Explorer posts will aid in directing traffic around the area.

The alumni and present members of the fraternity welcomed the pledges.

The committee in charge included Rita Benson, Mary Clare McNamee and Carolyn Burgan. Miss Roseann Langhans, advisor of Kappa Pi, assisted the girls.

West Virginians Facing Income Tax Next Year

Additional Revenue Is Vital Need

By J. RICHARD TOREN

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—It's far from being as sure as the proverbial death and taxes, but there is a very good chance that West Virginians will be paying a state income tax starting next year.

Times have definitely changed since the legislature gave short shrift to recommendations for an income tax by both Gov. Cecil H. Underwood and his predecessor, Gov. William C. Marland.

The new factor that will probably tip the scales in favor of the income tax is the recommendation it got this week from the prestigious State Tax Study Commission.

While the 15-member commission, representing business and industry as well as labor unions and other groups, did not suggest outright that such a tax should be imposed, it did make the first choice if the Legislature decides more state revenue is needed.

And the commission as much as said that more revenue is needed, in this manner:

"Our expenditures for education and highways as compared with other states leave little doubt that additional expenditures will be necessary to improve these facilities.

"In fact, West Virginia's need for improving our highways and educational facilities is probably the prime requisite to economic growth and for the attraction of industry."

Service "Low"

At the same time, the commission noted that West Virginia's state and local tax burden "is below the national average" and that the state has a "low ranking in governmental expenditures and services."

Gov.-elect W. W. Barron has indicated on many occasions that he will pay close attention to recommendations of the Tax Study Commission.

Reports from the Statehouse indicate that he may present to the legislature next month a program that will cost $15 to $17 million more than can be financed from present tax sources.

That kind of money can not easily be raised by further tinkering with the present state tax structure, as recent Legislatures have done when pressed for added state income. This also points to the probability that a new source of money such as an income tax might be tried.

Pointing in the same direction is the fact that an income tax has fairly solid backing from labor union groups in West Virginia, particularly the State Labor Federation, AFL-CIO.

Back in 1955 Marland proposed a state income levy based on a percentage of the taxpayer's federal income tax. Two main arguments were used to defeat it in the House of Delegates, that high federal rates had pre-empted the field, and that the proposed low-rate bill would be an entering wedge for later increases.

Had Strong Support

Three years later, Republican Gov. Underwood suggested that the lawmakers consider raising $15 million for schools through a 1 per cent tax on gross income above $2,000, but got nowhere with the proposal.

Barron, of course, is not committed to it—or to any other revenue source — but he has spoken in terms of programs that require more money then is now available, and may well find no other way to turn.

If the 1961 Legislature imposes an income tax, it will be returning to a source used by West Virginia for 10 years ending in 1943, and now used at the state and-or municipal level by all surrounding states.

The previous tax was based on 1 per cent of gross income from 1933 to 1935, and on net income at various rates from the latter year until its repeal in 1943. The most it ever yielded was $2,473,742 in 1942, when the rate ranged from 1 per cent on the first $1,000 of income after deduction, to 6 per cent on amounts over $6,000.

The State Tax Study Commission says West Virginia can now raise $2.5 million for each 1 per cent levy on the taxpayers' federal income tax payments, or, for example, $15 million through a 6 per cent tax.

Yule Tree Ceremony Scheduled

FROSTBURG — Plans for the annual community Christmas tree lighting ceremony Sunday at 6 p. m. at St. Paul's Lutheran Church are nearing completion, according to Miss Estelle Williams, chairman of the Music Study Group of the Frostburg-Georges Creek Branch of the AAUW.

Miss Williams said a large white pine tree was secured by Farrady Post 24, American Legion, under the chairmanship of Paul Stewart, Earl Miller and Ronald Hess in cooperation with the Kaiser Refractories and Chemicals Division, Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation, at Allegany. The company, which has clay stripping operations at Ohiopyle, Pa., cut the tree and brought it to Frostburg on a trailor-truck and presented it to the American Legion committee.

The Potomac Edison Company will erect the tree tomorrow morning after which Legion members will decorate the evergreen.

Mayor Joseph James will extend greetings of the city at the ceremony and Rev. E. M. Goetschius, pastor of First Presbyterian Church will offer the invocation. The Arion Band will present several selections, followed by the Christmas message by Mayor James. The Beall High School Chorus, under the direction of Miss Mary Robb, will sing "O Come, Come Emmanuel," "The First Noel" and the "Hallelujah Chorus." A carol sing will then be directed by Arthur Thomas, choir leader at First Methodist Church. Benediction will be in charge of Rev. Kenneth Morelock.

Boy Scout troops and Explorer posts will aid in directing traffic around the area.

The alumni and present members of the fraternity welcomed the pledges.

The committee in charge included Rita Benson, Mary Clare McNamee and Carolyn Burgan. Miss Roseann Langhans, advisor of Kappa Pi, assisted the girls.

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Republican National Committeeman Walter S. Hallanan said Thursday the GOP "has lost before and it will win again" in West Virginia.

Hallanan said West Virginia was in "no danger" of becoming a one-party state in spite of the sweeping Democratic victory at the polls last month.

"With a wealth of material coming from its young men and women, the Republican party in West Virginia will offer able candidates and forward - looking programs in the campaigns of 1962 and 1964," he said. "Our party in this state is vital and it is courageous."

Skelly Clarifies Car Damage Payment

Harry Skelly, supervisor of the County Roads Department, submitted a written statement to the Allegany County Board of Commissioners Tuesday concerning the payment by the county of a claim of $145 to a Cumberland couple for damages to their car.

Last week the board ordered payment of the damages to John Blough, Piedmont Avenue. His wife drove into the driveway of their home several weeks ago and struck a ditch which county road workers had dug.

Skelly said that Blough had purchased pipe for laying in a ditch which the county was digging and that Mrs. Blough had not been advised of the work to be done. He also stated that the accident occurred in the afternoon during daylight and that the county unit does not barricade or place lights on ditches which are off the traveled sections of roadways.

Skelly said the criticism leveled at his department is unjust as the ditching work will eliminate icing conditions in winter time for that section of the avenue which is located partly in the county and partly within the city limits of Cumberland.

Gas Supply Line Placed In Service

A $120,000 gas supply line feeding the north side of Cumberland has been turned into operation, giving local gas users an improved and expanded set of dual feeds into Cumberland.

Over two miles of new 12-inch pipeline has been placed in service between LaVale and Corriganville, replacing an older eight-inch pipeline, John S. Wilson, assistant district manager of Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company, said.

Eight years ago C&A put $712,000 into a new 12-inch supply line between Keyser and Cumberland to improve gas deliveries into the south end of town, the official pointed out.

Route of the new two-mile section of LaVale line parallels Cash Valley Road. The older line will be used to serve customers along its route. Wilkie Contracting Company, of Claysville, Pa., built the line and division superintendent Fred R. Cuppett, of Ellerslie, supervised work for the gas company. Construction began the last of October.

Gas is moved into Cumberland from the north and south. Gas is purchased at Ellerslie and routed five miles south to Cumberland. Three miles of that carrier was upgraded and the LaVale section was replaced to improve the entire line's cold weather gas deliverability.

B&O Men Are Given Promotions

Four promotions in the Stores Department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad affect Cumberlanders or former local residents.

Vincent B. Coyle, a native of here, was advanced from storekeeper at Mt. Clare in Baltimore to manager of inventory control for the system.

W. T. Dillon, who had been Cumberland Division storekeeper for a number of years, was promoted to supervisor of inventory controls in Baltimore, succeeding H. L. Grubb who was advanced to supervisor of materials.

His successor here is Leo C Boyd, who formerly resided here when he worked in the stores department as chief clerk.

The position's title has been changed to accounting division storekeeper. Boyd had been at Benwood, W. Va., as division storekeeper.

He has been succeeded at Benwood by H. L. Doffermyer, who once was here as assistant chief clerk.

Coyle began his railroad career in Cumberland in 1916 as a messenger and transferred to the stores department in 1917.

NLRB Election Set December 16

A National Labor Relations Board election will be held December 16 at the Eastern Express, Inc., garage in Bedford with the Teamsters Union and International Association of Machinists seeking bargaining rights for 100 mechanics and maintenance men of the firm.

C. E. Stutzman, business agent of Local 453, Teamsters Union, said the Machinists Union petitioned for the election claiming it has obtained a majority of the workers involved.

The Teamsters have had the men under contract for nine years, Stutzman said. The current contract with the trucking firm and Teamsters does not expire until January 31, 1961.

Phone Company To Expand Its Time Service

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company here is changing the number which provides its subscribers with the correct time of day, according to Robert G. Garner, office manager.

Starting today at 12:01 a.m., Mr. Garner said, the new number to call to get the correct time will be PA 2-8282.

Prior to the change, a TI exchange and number was used, but only certain subscribers in the area were able to dial direct and automatically get the time.

Mr. Garner explained that before only PArkview, REdwood and ROgers subscribers were able to dial the TIme number, but now all exchanges in Allegany County and the State Line (Pa.) subscribers will be able to dial the time number. Previously these subscribers had to dial "operator."

The new service was started last April, and since that time the daily requests for time has increased from 800 to over 1,000 a day.

The direct-dialing method provides a more efficient method of handling time requests and allows operators more time to handle normal telephone calls.

Mr. Garner said special equipment was installed and cable changes made to provide the new service which starts today.

Ask Safe Conduct

HAVANA (UPI)—The Argentine government has asked Cuba to grant safe conduct to labor leader Juan Francisco Collado. Collado sought asylum in the Argentine Embassy after taking part in a bomb plot that knocked out Havana's power last month.

Jury Begins

Zirk testified that he had not left the garage and knew nothing of the salesman's death until Trooper Jack L. Baker awoke him to question later that day. Zirk further testified that he had refused to "Indian wrestle" with Ritter and that the man hit him with a pop bottle and knocked him into a grease pit in the building.

Zirk said that in his drunken condition he took a swing with his fist at Ritter but "missed him by at least six feet." Ritter left the garage about 11 p. m., Zirk said.

Herb Evans, who operates a saddle horse concession at the Lost River State Park, testified that he had driven his wife to work early that morning and when he picked up a youth who helped him at the park he saw the Ritter car in the ditch with the lights on. Evans said there was another car nearby but the lights were not on. Evans said he thought that nothing was wrong so did not check into the situation.

Room Is Crowded

During the afternoon, four persons testified as character witnesses for Nolan Shreve, Brushy Run, who was a companion of Ritter prior to his death. All of the witnesses were found to be related to Shreve.

Zirk was indicted on the basis of testimony of Shreve to state police. A second statement was made by him several hours later.

Zirk was accused of causing the death of the salesman by sawing his arm back and forth across a broken window of his car.

A coroner's jury ruled Ritter died of loss of blood.

These are the 7 best made cars in the world.
One of them costs only $2250 complete.
Its name is Peugeot

*JOHN R. BOND, editor, ROAD & TRACK: "One question that seems perennial these days is which country builds the most or best quality into its automobiles.... In our opinion, there is no appreciable difference in the over-all quality of cars, whether they come from the U.S., France, Germany, England, Italy or Sweden....We choose these cars as being the best made in the world and of approximately equal quality..."

The Peugeot "403" is equipped with $350 worth of free accessories. These range from whitewalls and overdrive to a silent electric clock. It is so well made it costs next to nothing to maintain; owners averaged 97¢ on new parts last year. You get 30 miles to the gallon and the pleasure of owning one of the world's great cars.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD — The long absence from the screen of Jennifer Jones is over and the new year will ring in plenty of activity for Mrs. David Selznick. David tells me that in addition to "Tender is the Night," Jennifer also will do "Capitol Hill," a love story of social Washington, D.C., for 20th Century-Fox. No, David won't be the producer. The Andrew Tully novel which Simon and Schuster are bringing out has been turned over to Jerry Wald.

Neither is David operating in an official capacity on Jennifer's first picture to go, F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Tender is the Night." He admitted, however, that he is huddling with director Henry King about the right leading man. Henry, you recall, directed two Oscar winning movies with Jennifer, "Bernadette" and "Love is a Many Splendored Thing."

The week before Mack Sennett died he had agreed to sign releases for his contribution to the life story of Mabel Normand. He was to have 15 per cent of the story sale which included his services as technical advisor.

The story of Mabel, the madcap comedienne who captured the hearts of the movie going public in the silent days, is told in her biography "The Delinquent Angel" which Warner Brothers owns.

Natalie Wood is the actress that writers Erna Lazarus and Al Martin had in mind when they wrote the screen treatment. Nat should be very good as Mabel, whose life was so filled with tragedy.

Rosalind Russell spent two weeks traveling by subways to Brooklyn and the Bronx to get atmosphere for her role in "Majority of One." She says it would be in poor taste to try to do a Gertrude Berg dialogue, but she did want to study the people who live in these communities. Rosalind lunched in the delicatessens in Brooklyn, she said, and listened to the people talk.

Alex Guinness, who has the Sir Cedric Hardwicke role, will spend two weeks in Japan on his way here to join Roz and director Mervyn Leroy in March.

"I will be here for a year," Roz said, "because after I finish 'Majority of One,' I'll do 'Five Finger Exercise'."

Rita Beery, beautiful widow of Wallace Beery, telephoned from Scottsdale, Ariz., to tell me she had undergone surgery on her hip, and is now able to walk with a cane. She had trouble for many years with arthritis.

She said her daughter, Carol, now married to Jack Mackelvie, is driving to Arizona with her two children and her husband from Allentown, Pa. They'll spend the holidays with Rita, and perhaps locate in Scottsdale. Rita herself is now chairman of the arthritis foundation in Phoenix and works hard to raise money.

Carol has been working on TV and her husband also is an actor.

Certainly there's nothing amusing about needing psychiatric care—but it's getting almost ridiculous the way Brigitte Bardot's leading men, husbands and some directors seem to fall regularly into this category. Michel Sudor, 25, who has been signed for BB's new picture "La Bride Sur Le Cou" has very little acting experience, but he chats away merrily to the press about his neuroses

For example, some time ago he was supposed to marry the daughter of a wealthy Belgian tycoon but on the wedding day failed to show up at the church. He then spent three months in a psychiatric hospital in Switzerland!

On the troubled and dangerous situation in Africa, millionaire Ray Ryan and William Holden are trying to do their share to pour the soothing oil of kindness. At a cost borne between them, Ray and Bill have constructed a school near their Mt. Kenya Safari Club in Nanuyki, British East Africa, and have hired teachers to instruct the children of the Kikuyu tribesmen. Never previously have these children had the benefit of formal education.

Also, Ryan and Holden have contributed a community hall for adults of the tribe as well as a children's large playground. This action is a very effective answer to the intense Communist offensive in Africa and is bound to reap goodwill for the U.S.A.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I found something in my son's room today that just made me sick. If I hadn't been snooping I would confront him with it.

This summer he worked and didn't seem to save much money. I came across the key to his chest, and snooped, hoping to find that he had stashed away a few dollars. Instead I found an assortment of disgusting hand-drawn pictures. I didn't show these things to his father because he's a short-tempered man and would probably have thrown the boy out of the house.

I'm not a goody-goody mother who thinks her own children are perfect, but I must say this was a shock. He's 17, an excellent student, a regular church-goer and has never caused us any trouble. What shall I do?—H. M.

DEAR H. M.: You must not let the boy know you found the pictures. Most young people see some pornographic material at one time or another.

Broach the subject in an offhand way, (perhaps you can point out something in a magazine which is borderline). Make the point that people who get kicks from dirty pictures are not grown up regardless of their age. Understating your viewpoint will be more effective than clobbering the boy.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend of mine who comes from a cultured and educated family announced that her engagement is off. We don't know who broke it, but we don't feel it makes any difference. We think she should return the engagement gifts and give the fellow back the ring.

The girl has switched the engagement ring to her other hand and told me she has no intention of returning it.

I can't imagine a girl wanting to keep a ring that belonged to a fellow she didn't want to marry—or one who didn't want to marr her. The ring is very beautiful and it must have put him back plenty. What do you say? — PENNY

DEAR PENNY: The girl definitely should return the engagement gifts. She may keep the ring however, if HE broke the engagement. Nonetheless, I'm at a loss to understand why a girl would want to keep a ring which symbolizes a shattered romance. But some girls do. Perhaps it's comfort for the ego to be able to say, "Well, at least I got something out of the skunk."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What do you think of a husband who says, "Tomorrow is your birthday! Gee, honey, I almost forgot . . . what do you want?" And then when you tell him he says, "I've only got a few bucks, could you make me a loan?" And then when you give him $4 to put toward your birthday gift he comes home the next day and says, "I hope you don't mind but a guy at the shop offered to sell me his bowling ball at a real bargain so I used your birthday money." End of story.

—GIFTLESS

DEAR END: Next year give him a quarter and tell him to buy you a card.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DUMBEST WOMAN ALIVE: You aren't dumb—you're just not informed. Many people have written to me about the same problem. I can't discuss it in print, but your doctor can give you literature which will be helpful. Don't feel ashamed or guilty. You're not alone.

If alcohol is robbing you of someone you love of health and dignity, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Neither is David operating in an official capacity on Jennifer's first picture to go, F. Scott Fitzgerald's "Tender is the Night." He admitted, however, that he is huddling with director Henry King about the right leading man. Henry, you recall, directed two Oscar winning movies with Jennifer, "Bernadette" and "Love is a Many Splendored Thing."

The week before Mack Sennett died he had agreed to sign releases for his contribution to the life story of Mabel Normand. He was to have 15 per cent of the story sale which included his services as technical advisor.

The story of Mabel, the madcap comedienne who captured the hearts of the movie going public in the silent days, is told in her biography "The Delinquent Angel" which Warner Brothers owns.

Natalie Wood is the actress that writers Erna Lazarus and Al Martin had in mind when they wrote the screen treatment. Nat should be very good as Mabel, whose life was so filled with tragedy.

Rosalind Russell spent two weeks traveling by subways to Brooklyn and the Bronx to get atmosphere for her role in "Majority of One." She says it would be in poor taste to try to do a Gertrude Berg dialogue, but she did want to study the people who live in these communities. Rosalind lunched in the delicatessens in Brooklyn, she said, and listened to the people talk.

Alex Guinness, who has the Sir Cedric Hardwicke role, will spend two weeks in Japan on his way here to join Roz and director Mervyn Leroy in March.

"I will be here for a year," Roz said, "because after I finish 'Majority of One,' I'll do 'Five Finger Exercise'."

Rita Beery, beautiful widow of Wallace Beery, telephoned from Scottsdale, Ariz., to tell me she had undergone surgery on her hip, and is now able to walk with a cane. She had trouble for many years with arthritis.

She said her daughter, Carol, now married to Jack Mackelvie, is driving to Arizona with her two children and her husband from Allentown, Pa. They'll spend the holidays with Rita, and perhaps locate in Scottsdale. Rita herself is now chairman of the arthritis foundation in Phoenix and works hard to raise money.

Carol has been working on TV and her husband also is an actor.

Certainly there's nothing amusing about needing psychiatric care—but it's getting almost ridiculous the way Brigitte Bardot's leading men, husbands and some directors seem to fall regularly into this category. Michel Sudor, 25, who has been signed for BB's new picture "La Bride Sur Le Cou" has very little acting experience, but he chats away merrily to the press about his neuroses

For example, some time ago he was supposed to marry the daughter of a wealthy Belgian tycoon but on the wedding day failed to show up at the church. He then spent three months in a psychiatric hospital in Switzerland!

On the troubled and dangerous situation in Africa, millionaire Ray Ryan and William Holden are trying to do their share to pour the soothing oil of kindness. At a cost borne between them, Ray and Bill have constructed a school near their Mt. Kenya Safari Club in Nanuyki, British East Africa, and have hired teachers to instruct the children of the Kikuyu tribesmen. Never previously have these children had the benefit of formal education.

Also, Ryan and Holden have contributed a community hall for adults of the tribe as well as a children's large playground. This action is a very effective answer to the intense Communist offensive in Africa and is bound to reap goodwill for the U.S.A.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I found something in my son's room today that just made me sick. If I hadn't been snooping I would confront him with it.

This summer he worked and didn't seem to save much money. I came across the key to his chest, and snooped, hoping to find that he had stashed away a few dollars. Instead I found an assortment of disgusting hand-drawn pictures. I didn't show these things to his father because he's a short-tempered man and would probably have thrown the boy out of the house.

I'm not a goody-goody mother who thinks her own children are perfect, but I must say this was a shock. He's 17, an excellent student, a regular church-goer and has never caused us any trouble. What shall I do?—H. M.

DEAR H. M.: You must not let the boy know you found the pictures. Most young people see some pornographic material at one time or another.

Broach the subject in an offhand way, (perhaps you can point out something in a magazine which is borderline). Make the point that people who get kicks from dirty pictures are not grown up regardless of their age. Understating your viewpoint will be more effective than clobbering the boy.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A friend of mine who comes from a cultured and educated family announced that her engagement is off. We don't know who broke it, but we don't feel it makes any difference. We think she should return the engagement gifts and give the fellow back the ring.

The girl has switched the engagement ring to her other hand and told me she has no intention of returning it.

I can't imagine a girl wanting to keep a ring that belonged to a fellow she didn't want to marry—or one who didn't want to marr her. The ring is very beautiful and it must have put him back plenty. What do you say? — PENNY

DEAR PENNY: The girl definitely should return the engagement gifts. She may keep the ring however, if HE broke the engagement. Nonetheless, I'm at a loss to understand why a girl would want to keep a ring which symbolizes a shattered romance. But some girls do. Perhaps it's comfort for the ego to be able to say, "Well, at least I got something out of the skunk."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: What do you think of a husband who says, "Tomorrow is your birthday! Gee, honey, I almost forgot . . . what do you want?" And then when you tell him he says, "I've only got a few bucks, could you make me a loan?" And then when you give him $4 to put toward your birthday gift he comes home the next day and says, "I hope you don't mind but a guy at the shop offered to sell me his bowling ball at a real bargain so I used your birthday money." End of story.

—GIFTLESS

DEAR END: Next year give him a quarter and tell him to buy you a card.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DUMBEST WOMAN ALIVE: You aren't dumb—you're just not informed. Many people have written to me about the same problem. I can't discuss it in print, but your doctor can give you literature which will be helpful. Don't feel ashamed or guilty. You're not alone.

If alcohol is robbing you of someone you love of health and dignity, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Joe Bellino Is Presented Grid Trophy

Accepts Heisman Award At Dinner

NEW YORK (UPI) — All-America Joe Bellino of Winchester, Mass., Navy's record-setting back, was awarded the Heisman Trophy Thursday night as America's outstanding college football player of 1960.

The 26th annual award of the Downtown Athletic Club was presented by club President Clifford E. Deming at a dinner attended by Bellino's father, brother, and 900 other guests.

"It's the greatest honor of my life to have my name placed on this trophy along with the 25 other winners of past years," said the modest Navy ace who scored 111 points this season and cracked all Navy ball-carrying records.

At a noon lunch, Bellino said he planned to enter the Navy's submarine service or the U.S. Marine Corps when he is graduated as an ensign next June and any thoughts of pro sports "will have to wait until my four years of obligations to the Navy have ended."

"By then, I'll be 26 and perhaps not have either the physical or mental ability to play pro football or baseball," he said. "But if I do have a chance to turn professional some day, I'd choose baseball, not football."

Bellino is captain, catcher and leading hitter of the 1960 Navy baseball team.

"Ive been approached already by just about every baseball club you ever heard of," he said. "No specific amount of money has been mentioned as a bonus except it started at $50,000."

Michigan Pro Leads Tourney

Barnum's 65 Heads Coral Gables Field

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (UPI)—John Barnum, 49-year-old home pro from Grand Rapids, Mich., wielded a precision putter Thursday in shooting a 6-under-par 65 for a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $20,000 Coral Gables Open golf tournament.

Barnum knocked in five putts of from 10 to 30 feet to finish one shot in front of Marty Furgol of Coghill, Ill., and former PGA champion Jim Turnesa of Coghill, Ill., and former PGA champion Jim Turnesa of Rye, N.Y.

The touring professionals went on a par-busting picnic with no less than 36 of the field shooting under-par golf.

There were four at 67, including Tom Garrity of Kansas City, Don Massengale of Jacksboro, Tex., Gardner Dickinson of Palm Beach, Fla., and Bob Goalby of Crystal River, Fla.

Leading money - winner Arnold Palmer and Sam Snead, two of the pre - tournament favorites, were in a cluster of nine who shot 68.

Those at 69 included former PGA champ Dow Finsterwald while those at even-par 71 were Johnny Pott, winner of last week's West Palm Beach Open and former U.S. Open winners Tommy Bolt and Ed Furgol.

Tri-State Cage Event On Tap For Next Week

Four High Schools To Vie At Paw Paw

Four high schools — three from West Virginia and one from Pennsylvania — will participate in the annual Tri-State Holiday Basketball Tournament to be staged at Paw Paw High School, Friday and Saturday, December 16 and 17.

The first session on December 16 finds Hancock High playing Berkeley Springs at 7:30 p.m., while the second game brings together Paw Paw and Southern-Fulton High of Warfordsburg, Pa., at 8:30.

The championship game is scheduled Saturday night at 8:30 and will be preceded by the consolation game between the two Friday losers at 7:30.

Joe Hartle, Hagerstown, and Joe Stanislawczyk, Keyser, will officiate.

This is the second year for the tournament. Last year the event was staged at Hancock High School and Paw Paw was the winner.

Navy Athlete Will Play In Two Bowls

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Midshipman Al Hughes is getting ready to play in two bowls in two sports.

He'll captain the Navy basketball team in the Gator Bowl tournament at Jacksonville Dec. 29-30.

On Jan. 2, he'll be a halfback on Navy's football team against Missouri in the Orange Bowl.

SCORING RECORD

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams set a National Football League single - game scoring record when they bounced the old Baltimore Colts, 70-27, on Oct. 22, 1950.

Syracuse will meet five new football rivals in 1961. They are Notre Dame, Maryland, Nebraska, Oregon State and Boston College.

Nugent Denies Redskins, Eagles Approached Him

Maryland Coach, However, Admits He's Interested

BALTIMORE (AP) — Football Coach Tom Nugent of Maryland denied rumors Thursday he has been approached by the Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins. But he didn't say he wouldn't be available.

"I haven't talked to anybody from either team (Eagles or Redskins) about a job," Nugent told the Baltimore Evening Sun.

"This is not to say that I wouldn't be interested in an opportunity like that."

Nugent has two years remaining on a four-year contract with the University of Maryland.

The Evening Sun said that Vince McNally, general manager of the Eagles, is an old friend of Nugent.

It has been anticipated that Buck Shaw will retire as coach of the Eagles after they play for the championship of the National Football League scheduled in Philadelphia Dec. 26.

"We have a great coach in Shaw and I'm trying to keep him with us," the newspaper quoted McNally.

"We have a championship game coming up and I do not want to become involved in speculation over the successor to a coach who hasn't even quit."

Mike Nixon still is coach of the Redskins, also. But speculation has been rife in Washington that he will not be back next season.

Nugent conceded it was natural to connect him with Redskin rumors.

"After all, I'm right here in the neighborhood and their owner, George Marshall has said some nice things about me.

"Then, too, a lot of people feel that my wide open style of offense would readily lend itself to pro talent."

Nugent is credited with originating the I formation in which the four backs line up single file behind center on offense.

Gophers Battle Unbeaten Terps Saturday Night

Maryland Cagers Head West Today

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—University of Maryland's undefeated basketball team heads West Friday for their invasion of the Big Ten and an intersectional meeting with Minnesota Saturday night.

This will be the first game played between the Terps and Gophers.

Maryland coach H.A. "Bud" Millikan's young team has surprised with its three consecutive victories, especially since their leading scorer of last year, junior Paul Jelus, Camden, N.J. hasn't, started a game yet because of an ankle injury.

An ankle injury to 6-6 sophomore Jerry Greenspan, Newark, N.J., an exceptional prospect, also had kept him out of the lineup until a token appearance in the George Washington game.

The Terps have victories over Penn State, 64-47; Virginia, 57-52; and George Washington, 80-68.

Minnesota, with John Kundla in his second year, has won one and lost two. In the season's opener, they lost to the nation's second ranked team Bradley, 64-60, in the last minute. They lost another four point decision to a fine Oklahoma team at Norman, 60-56, then won over Missouri by four points 60-56 on the Tigers' court.

Millikan will call on the same starting five that opened the Penn State game. Bob McDonald, 6-7 senior, Landsdowne, Pa., and 6-3 sophomore Bill Stasiulatis, Bayonne, N.J., at forwards; 6-10 senior Bob Wilson, Freedom, Pa., at center; and 6-2 junior Bruce Kelleher, Wilmington, Del., and 6-2 sophomore Bob Eicher, Greensburg, Pa. at guards.

On Jan. 2, he'll be a halfback on Navy's football team against Missouri in the Orange Bowl.

SCORING RECORD

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams set a National Football League single - game scoring record when they bounced the old Baltimore Colts, 70-27, on Oct. 22, 1950.

Syracuse will meet five new football rivals in 1961. They are Notre Dame, Maryland, Nebraska, Oregon State and Boston College.

Nugent Denies Redskins, Eagles Approached Him

Maryland Coach, However, Admits He's Interested

BALTIMORE (AP) — Football Coach Tom Nugent of Maryland denied rumors Thursday he has been approached by the Philadelphia Eagles and Washington Redskins. But he didn't say he wouldn't be available.

"I haven't talked to anybody from either team (Eagles or Redskins) about a job," Nugent told the Baltimore Evening Sun.

"This is not to say that I wouldn't be interested in an opportunity like that."

Nugent has two years remaining on a four-year contract with the University of Maryland.

The Evening Sun said that Vince McNally, general manager of the Eagles, is an old friend of Nugent.

It has been anticipated that Buck Shaw will retire as coach of the Eagles after they play for the championship of the National Football League scheduled in Philadelphia Dec. 26.

"We have a great coach in Shaw and I'm trying to keep him with us," the newspaper quoted McNally.

"We have a championship game coming up and I do not want to become involved in speculation over the successor to a coach who hasn't even quit."

Mike Nixon still is coach of the Redskins, also. But speculation has been rife in Washington that he will not be back next season.

Nugent conceded it was natural to connect him with Redskin rumors.

"After all, I'm right here in the neighborhood and their owner, George Marshall has said some nice things about me.

"Then, too, a lot of people feel that my wide open style of offense would readily lend itself to pro talent."

Nugent is credited with originating the I formation in which the four backs line up single file behind center on offense.

Gophers Battle Unbeaten Terps Saturday Night

Maryland Cagers Head West Today

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—University of Maryland's undefeated basketball team heads West Friday for their invasion of the Big Ten and an intersectional meeting with Minnesota Saturday night.

This will be the first game played between the Terps and Gophers.

Maryland coach H.A. "Bud" Millikan's young team has surprised with its three consecutive victories, especially since their leading scorer of last year, junior Paul Jelus, Camden, N.J. hasn't, started a game yet because of an ankle injury.

An ankle injury to 6-6 sophomore Jerry Greenspan, Newark, N.J., an exceptional prospect, also had kept him out of the lineup until a token appearance in the George Washington game.

The Terps have victories over Penn State, 64-47; Virginia, 57-52; and George Washington, 80-68.

Minnesota, with John Kundla in his second year, has won one and lost two. In the season's opener, they lost to the nation's second ranked team Bradley, 64-60, in the last minute. They lost another four point decision to a fine Oklahoma team at Norman, 60-56, then won over Missouri by four points 60-56 on the Tigers' court.

Millikan will call on the same starting five that opened the Penn State game. Bob McDonald, 6-7 senior, Landsdowne, Pa., and 6-3 sophomore Bill Stasiulatis, Bayonne, N.J., at forwards; 6-10 senior Bob Wilson, Freedom, Pa., at center; and 6-2 junior Bruce Kelleher, Wilmington, Del., and 6-2 sophomore Bob Eicher, Greensburg, Pa. at guards.

Jim Norris Admits Link With Carbo

Underworld Czar's Wife Paid $45,000

IBC Chief Assumes Heavy Title Bout Set Up By Carbo

By NORMAN G. CORNISH

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Millionaire sports promoter James D. Norris told Senate investigators Thursday he gave the wife of racketeer Frankie Carbo a $45,000 job after unsuccessfully seeking advice from Carbo on how to "ease" problems troubling the International Boxing Club.

In a statement which he read at a closed-door hearing of the Senate Anti-Trust and Monopoly Committee, Norris said he sought Carbo's assistance because he (Carbo) "was on friendly terms with more fight managers than anyone in boxing."

Mrs. Carbo Paid $45,000

When Carbo declined because he had "problems of his own," Norris said, he hired the racketeer's blonde wife, Viola. Committee records previously had showed that a Norris-controlled company had paid Mrs. Carbo $45,000.

Norris' closed-door testimony came the day after he was described in congressional testimony as the "big boss" of boxing—the man with the money—who shared control with a "little boss"—Carbo, the reputed underworld czar of boxing.

Norris told the senators he "assumed" but could not confirm definitely that Carbo set up the second heavyweight championship fight between Rocky Marciano and Jersey Joe Walcott in Chicago in 1953. He said Marciano's manager, Al Weill, and Walcott's manager, Felix Bocchicchio, who had been opposing the second fight, told him: "Well, they put a lot of pressure on me—I guess I have to . . . go through with the match."

The former IBC chief said that Carbo also apparently set up the bout between Marciano and Harry Matthews in New York in 1952.

Carbo, now serving a two-year prison term for undercover management of fighters, long has been reputed to have been an influential figure in the fight world.

Committee Chairman Estes F. Kefauver, D - Tenn., permitted Norris to testify in private at the request of his doctors who feared that tension resulting from public testimony might cause a recurrence of Norris' heart trouble.

The sportsman, who owns the Chicago Black Hawks hockey team and maintains a racing stable, was president of the IBC until it was dissolved last year by a Federal Court order on the ground that it held a monopoly stranglehold over boxing.

Dealt With Palermo

In his statement, Norris also said he dealt with Frank "Blinky" Palermo, reputed Philadelphia numbers king, fight manager and close associate of Carbo. Senate investigators have charged that Palermo, who has managed several world champions, was handpicked by Carbo to rule the boxing world until Carbo is released from prison.

Noting that Palermo controlled several champions when the IBC was formed, Norris said his organization dealt with Palermo because "it was very important that we were able to include champion Ike Williams' stature on our programs." Palermo also managed Johnny Saxton, former welterweight champion, now in an insane asylum.

Racing Gimmicks Cause For Alarm — Benny In The News Memories Of 1951

By C. V. BURNS

THERE HAS BEEN much said pro and con regarding the gimmicks that are being employed nowadays by the race tracks in an effort to squeeze the last dollar out of the paying patrons.

Many of the big men of racing realize that it has grown into a nationwide lottery and they are becoming alarmed.

Spencer Drayton, formerly of the F.B.I., and now head of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations, has called on member tracks to abolish multiple betting pools such as Papaleta, Bonanza and Pic-Six.

He is of the firm conviction this lottery style of wagering is basically and fundamentally bad for the sport and would have it outlawed.

Eddie Brennan, who served as racing secretary of the Cumberland Fair Association for 21 years and is now vice president and general manager at Monmouth Park, N. J., says:

"If I had my way, there would be 12 races every day, with two daily doubles and two Pic-Sixes."

Perhaps Eddie is letting us in on a secret of things to come.

On the opposite side, however, is Jimmy Langford, mutuels manager at Delaware Park, who once held the same post at Fairgo. Jimmy Says:

"Pic-Six is nothing but a lottery and will last only until someone tests a case in court."

Neil Curry, of the California Racing Commission, puts it this way:

"The cure for poor attendance and low wagering does not lie in the horse race version of "Bank Night."

"There is a hard core of 25 per cent of the population in my state, and, I think in most other states, who would like to abolish racing. I feel over-commercialization merely adds fuel to their arguments."

And here is what H. Courtenay Jennifer, of the Maryland Racing Commission, has to say:

"Maybe we have too much racing. Perhaps we could think less revenue and more of keeping the people close to racing as a sport. This looking for every last dollar and wringing it may not be the best judgment."

WILLIAM E. "Billy" Davis, 29, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. U. Davis, who died Sunday when his small plane plunged into the Bay of Colon near Panama City, was a member of the First Presbyterian quint that won the Sunday School Basketball League championship 15 years ago.

That was the last time the Presbyterians bagged the title and it gave them their third crown in five years.

Ned Clopton, Johnny Vernall and Ronnie Sterne, who were also members of that 1945 team, went on to star at Allegany High School for teams coached by Walter L. Bowers.

Ralph Lashley and John Twigg were the other members of the Presbyterian squad.

THE BOXING probe being conducted in Washington by Senator Estes Kefauver's committee should be of interest to fans of this area because of the fact that Benny Trotta, of Baltimore, has been mentioned as being "very friendly" with Frankie Carbo, who is described as a "hoodlum with widespread power in the fight business."

In 1956, Gov. Theodore McKeldin blew the whistle on Trotta and revoked the latter's license in Maryland because of alleged connections with Carbo. Benny, however, is now back in business promoting fights in Baltimore.

Benny held a Maryland license in 1951 and he was in on the promotion of several bad shows in Cumberland.

His last show here was June 29, 1951. There hasn't been a pro show since.

ONE of Cumberland's best known policemen died this week when Luther L. Youngblood passed on at the age of 70.

Luther retired six years ago after 30 years of service, most of which he spent in the motorcycle branch of the department.

His friends knew him as "Gook" and his fellow workers always had a good word for tthe big, friendly fellow.

Fifty years ago, "Gook" was a member of Cumberland's championship football team whose personnel included Raymond "Red" Allen, "Hump" Johnson, Russell "Mike" Diehl, Bernard Egan, Hunter Long, Ralph Diebold, Rene Schupfer, Bill Paisley, Lou Hoffman, Charley Wolfe and Cleve Himmler.

The 1909 and 1910 teams reigned as Allegany county champions.

Price Gets 38 As Fort Ashby Whips Romney

Pioneers Suffer 2nd Defeat, 80-59

Center Paul Price racked up a total of 38 points last night in sparking Coach Quentin Sayers' Fort Ashby High School Eagles to an 80-59 triumph over the floormen of Romney High School in a Potomac Valley Conference game played at Romney.

The win gave Fort Ashby a 1-1 record in the conference. The loss was the second for the Pioneers against a single victory.

Price collected 13 field goals and meshed 12 of 17 free throws and his total of 38 tallies was one less than the season high set by Orville Harper of Circleville who scored 10 goals and 19-20 fouls against Petersburg on December 6.

Harold Kerns was the runner-up for the Eagles with 15 markers.

Connie Davis, John Blue and Monty Mathias headed the Romney scoring with 18, 17 and 16 points, respectively.

Fort Ashby held a 29-25 edge in field goals and hooped 22 of 33 foul shots. Romney sank 9 of 16 at the free throw line.

The teams battled to a 17-17 tie in the first period but Fort Ashby grabbed the long end of a 39-27 score at halftime and never was headed.

Terry Mezzatesta and Davis of Romney fouled out in the final period. Box score:

Open Five-Match Series At Perth

PERTH, Australia (UPI)—The United States and Italian Davis Cup teams went through 90-minute practice sessions Thursday and each struck a note of confidence for Fridays' opening round of the inter-zone tennis finals.

Young Earl (Butch) Buchholzof St. Louis faces Orlando Sirola in the opening singles match of the best-of-five series, with Barry MacKay of Dayton, Ohio, pitted against Nicola Pietrangeli in the second match.

"We're happy with the draw and happy with our form; so now it's ready for action tomorrow," said American non-playing captain David Freed. "I still stick with my earlier prediction that we will win this by a 3-2 margin."

Jaroslav Drobny, Italian coach-manager said the Sirola - Buchholz match could produce the key to his team's victory.

"If we win this first one," said Drobny, "I'm confident we will have a 2-0 lead at the end of the day's play."

Chuck McKinley of St. Louis and Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., named for Saturday's doubles match against Sirola and Pietrangeli, did not practice as a combination Thursday. Instead, McKinley teamed with Buchholz and Ralston with MacKay.

Johnstown Plays YMCA Varsity In Contest Tonight

Coach Roy Manges' undefeated YMCA Varsity Basketball Team will be seeking its fourth win on the local "Y" court tonight when it plays the Johnstown (Pa.) YMCA Varsity Five at 7:30 o'clock.

Annapolis Navy Enlisted Men's Team plays here Friday at 7:30 and on Saturday, Dec. 17 the Army Air Corps Hornets of Washington will face the local quint at 8 o'clock. All of these teams will be appearing in Cumberland for the first time.

Haney Lands Angels' Job

Fred Appointed General Manager

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fred Haney, who developed as a baseball player on the sandlots of Los Angeles, Thursday was named general manager of the Los Angeles Angels, the newly franchised American League club.

Although Haney's name had been linked with the new club by franchise holders Gene Autry and Bob Reynolds, the veteran baseball manager's appointment as general manager was not made public until Autry and Reynolds appeared before a luncheon to announce plans for the new club.

"We might as well make it public and announce it here and now that Fred Haney is our new general manager," Reynolds as president of the club said.

Haney said he hoped that the new club could pick its field manager before next Tuesday's draft of players by the new American League teams at Boston.

Among those being "screened" as possibilities for the job, Haney said, were Casey Stengel, Leo Durocher, Bill Rigney, Bill Jurges, Bob Elliott and several others. Autry and Reynolds said they had talked to Stengel previously but no decision was made by the ex-Yankee manager.

Racing Gimmicks Cause For Alarm — Benny In The News — Memories Of 1951

By C. V. BURNS

THERE HAS BEEN much said pro and con regarding the gimmicks that are being employed nowadays by the race tracks in an effort to squeeze the last dollar out of the paying patrons.

Many of the big men of racing realize that it has grown into a nationwide lottery and they are becoming alarmed.

Spencer Drayton, formerly of the F.B.I., and now head of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations, has called on member tracks to abolish multiple betting pools such as Papaleta, Bonanza and Pic-Six.

He is of the firm conviction this lottery style of wagering is basically and fundamentally bad for the sport and would have it outlawed.

Eddie Brennan, who served as racing secretary of the Cumberland Fair Association for 21 years and is now vice president and general manager at Monmouth Park, N. J., says:

"If I had my way, there would be 12 races every day, with two daily doubles and two Pic-Sixes."

Perhaps Eddie is letting us in on a secret of things to come.

On the opposite side, however, is Jimmy Langford, mutuels manager at Delaware Park, who once held the same post at Fairgo. Jimmy Says:

"Pic-Six is nothing but a lottery and will last only until someone tests a case in court."

Neil Curry, of the California Racing Commission, puts it this way:

"The cure for poor attendance and low wagering does not lie in the horse race version of "Bank Night."

"There is a hard core of 25 per cent of the population in my state, and, I think in most other states, who would like to abolish racing. I feel overcommercialization merely adds fuel to their arguments."

And here is what H. Courtenay Jennifer, of the Maryland Racing Commission, has to say:

"Maybe we have too much racing. Perhaps we could think less revenue and more of keeping the people close to racing as a sport. This looking for every last dollar and wringing it may not be the best judgment."

WILLIAM E. "Billy" Davis, 29, son of Dr. and Mrs. F. U. Davis, who died Sunday when his small plane plunged into the Bay of Colon near Panama City, was a member of the First Presbyterian quint that won the Sunday School Basketball League championship 15 years ago.

That was the last time the Presbyterians bagged the title and it gave them their third crown in five years.

Ned Clopton, Johnny Vernall and Ronnie Sterne, who were also members of that 1945 team, went on to star at Allegany High School for teams coached by Walter L. Bowers.

Ralph Lashley and John Twigg were the other members of the Presbyterian squad.

THE BOXING probe being conducted in Washington by Senator Estes Kefauver's committee should be of interest to fans of this area because of the fact that Benny Trotta, of Baltimore, has been mentioned as being "very friendly" with Frankie Carbo, who is described as a "hoodlum with widespread power in the fight business."

In 1956, Gov. Theodore McKeldin blew the whistle on Trotta and revoked the latter's license in Maryland because of alleged connections with Carbo. Benny, however, is now back in business promoting fights in Baltimore.

Benny held a Maryland license in 1951 and he was in on the promotion of several bad shows in Cumberland.

His last show here was June 29, 1951. There hasn't been a pro show since.

ONE of Cumberland's best known policemen died this week when Luther L. Youngblood passed on at the age of 70.

Luther retired six years ago after 30 years of service, most of which he spent in the motorcycle branch of the departmen..

His friends knew him as "Gook" and his fellow workers always had a good word for tthe big, friendly fellow.

Fifty years ago, "Gook" was a member of Cumberland's championship football team whose personnel included Raymond "Red" Allen, "Hump" Johnson, Russell "Mike" Diehl, Bernard Egan, Hunter Long, Ralph Diebold, Rene Schupfer, Bill Paisley, Lou Hoffman, Charley Wolfe and Cleve Himmler.

The 1909 and 1910 teams reigned as Allegany county champions.

Price Gets 38 As Fort Ashby Whips Romney

Pioneers Suffer 2nd Defeat, 80-59

Center Paul Price racked up a total of 38 points last night in sparking Coach Quentin Sayers' Fort Ashby High School Eagles to an 80-59 triumph over the floormen of Romney High School in a Potomac Valley Conference game played at Romney.

The win gave Fort Ashby a 1-1 record in the conference. The loss was the second for the Pioneers against a single victory.

Price collected 13 field goals and meshed 12 of 17 free throws and his total of 38 tallies was one less than the season high set by Orville Harper of Circleville who scored 10 goals and 19-20 fouls against Petersburg on December 6.

Harold Kerns was the runner-up for the Eagles with 15 markers.

Connie Davis, John Blue and Monty Mathias headed the Romney scoring with 18, 17 and 16 points, respectively.

Fort Ashby held a 29-25 edge in field goals and hooped 22 of 33 foul shots. Romney sank 9 of 16 at the free throw line.

The teams battled to a 17-17 tie in the first period but Fort Ashby grabbed the long end of a 39-27 score at halftime and never was headed.

Terry Mezzatesta and Davis of Romney fouled out in the final period. Box score:

Open Five-Match Series At Perth

PERTH, Australia (UPI)—The United States and Italian Davis Cup teams went through 90-minute practice sessions Thursday and each struck a note of confidence for Fridays' opening round of the inter-zone tennis finals.

Young Earl (Butch) Buchholzof St. Louis faces Orlando Sirola in the opening singles match of the best-of-five series, with Barry MacKay of Dayton, Ohio, pitted against Nicola Pietrangeli in the second match.

"We're happy with the draw and happy with our form; so now it's ready for action tomorrow," said American non - playing captain David Freed. "I still stick with my earlier prediction that we will win this by a 3-2 margin."

Jaroslav Drobny, Italian coach-manager said the Sirola - Buchholz match could produce the key to his team's victory.

"If we win this first one," said Drobny, "I'm confident we will have a 2-0 lead at the end of the day's play."

Chuck McKinley of St. Louis and Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., named for Saturday's doubles match against Sirola and Pietrangeli, did not practice as a combination Thursday. Instead, McKinley teamed with Buchholz and Ralston with MacKay.

Haney Lands Angels' Job

Fred Appointed General Manager

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fred Haney, who developed as a baseball player on the sandlots of Los Angeles, Thursday was named general manager of the Los Angeles Angels, the newly franchised American League club.

Although Haney's name had been linked with the new club by franchise holders Gene Autry and Bob Reynolds, the veteran baseball manager's appointment as general manager was not made public until Autry and Reynolds appeared before a luncheon to announce plans for the new club.

"We might as well make it public and announce it here and now that Fred Haney is our new general manager," Reynolds as president of the club said.

Haney said he hoped that the new club could pick its field manager before next Tuesday's draft of players by the new American League teams at Boston.

Among those being "screened" as possibilities for the job, Haney said, were Casey Stengel, Leo Durocher, Bill Rigney, Bill Jurges, Bob Elliott and several others. Autry and Reynolds said they had talked to Stengel previously but no decision was made by the ex-Yankee manager.

SPORTS SPUTTERINGS

By Walter L. Johns, Central Press Sports Editor

WE DIDN'T SEE the fight, and, from the end result, we doubt if two of the officials saw it, either.

Our concern is the windup of the Gene Fullmer-Sugar Ray Robinson meeting in Los Angeles, with the official result being a draw based on the decision of two judges and the referee.

According to the facts, here is the way the voting went:

Referee Tommy Hart—Robinson, 11-4.

Judge George Latka—Even.

Judge Lee Grossman—Fullmer, 9-5.

Now we ask—and of course we shouldn't for we have been at ringside many times and our scores didn't always jibe with others—how can one man see it overwhelmingly in favor of Robinson and the other for Fullmer—and a third man see it all even?

It's a matter of what you see and how you evaluate it, of course.

THE RESULT of this latest Robbie-Fullmer go-around accents one thing again—the need for a uniform system of scoring boxing bouts and perhaps setting up a bigger group to do the scoring.

It has been mentioned before, and we have advocated it for years, that perhaps boxing bouts should be scored, round by round, by a group of qualified newsmen, and/or officials, sitting around the ringside.

Qualified newsmen have seen as many or more boxing bouts than the judges and the referee handling an occasional bout in their town. A national agreement on scoring should be reached and the qualified group asked to mark their score sheets at the end of the round, with announcements made after the round as to the progress of the fight.

• • •

IT HAS been our opinion, for years, that while a referee is in the best position to judge a boxing bout—he's standing there right in the ring—he's too busy keeping the fight going and moving to be able to do the best-qualified job of score-keeping. This is not a rap at the referee in this fight, for many in the TV audience did think Robbie won it and Hart saw it that way.

We believe the fans at a boxing bout, or the TV audience, is entitled to know who is ahead. Additionally, it would be better for the fighters, too, for it would drum up the guy on the losing end and a better fight would result.

In the Fullmer bout, Gene revealed later, his handlers thought he was ahead and he was more or less coasting. But that ain't the way the one judge and the referee saw it.

Brooks Rides Four Winners

Ups Total To 28 At Pimlico Meet

BALTIMORE, Md. Dec. 8 (AP) —Steve Brooks, 40-year-old reinsman from McCook, Nebraska, completely overshadowed rival jockeys at Pimlico today when he rode four winners.

The Maryland Jockey Club's leading rider, Brooks started his big day in the first race when he won with Miltie's Miss for a $5.40 payoff. He came back with Harwood at $3.40 in the third race, Midpassage at $7.40 in the fourth race and then took the seventh event with Oildorado, who returned $8.00 win mutuel.

The four wins gave Brooks a total of 28 victories for the twenty-two-day-old meeting and he has practically outdistanced rivals. Bobby Corle is currently in runner-up position in the local saddle contest with sixteen wins.

While four days of the 28-day meeting still remain, Brooks plans to leave for Florida on Saturday after riding Beau Diable in the $20,000-added Pimlico Cup at a mile and a sixteenth.

Howard Dyer Voted Player Of The Year

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI)—Quarterback Howard Dyer, the best passer in the history of Virginia Military Institute, Thursday was named Southern Conference football player of the year.

Dyer, Greenville, Miss., was the choice on all but one person in a poll of 53 members of the conference sportswriters association. The other vote went to Richmond halfback Earl Stoudt.

With the honor goes the Roy M. Hawley Memorial Trophy, named in memory of the former West Virginia University athletic director who died in 1954.

The Sports Patrol

By STEVE SNIDER

NEW YORK (UPI)—The late Bert Bell had a dream 25 years ago about a National Football League race like this one.

The Philadelphia Eagles have clinched one berth in the league's championship playoff but 27 possibilities for ties exist in the other conference and nothing would have pleased Bert better—except 27 possibilities in both divisions of the league.

As things stand now (I think), Baltimore, Detroit, Green Bay and San Francisco can wind up in a Western Division tie with 7-5 records. Or Baltimore, Chicago, Green Bay and San Francisco can wind up in a four-way tie at 6-4-2.

There are four different combinations for three-way ties at 7-5 and three combinations for three-way ties at 7-4-1.

Could Win Outright

Of course, there's also a mild chance that Baltimore, Green Bay or San Francisco can win the title outright by sweeping their final two games.

When Bell was operating the last place Eagles back in 1935, long before he became the league's visionary commissioner, he came up with an idea to level off competition in the league between the "haves" and "have nots."

Bert proposed the first collegiate draft which enabled the worst teams in the league to pick the best of the college crop for the next year.

In theory, like handicapping horses, all pro clubs would come down to the wire in a dead heat.

As in racing, it's only theory but over the years the league actually has levelled off to a great extent until, after he became commissioner, Bell could say without fear of contradiction, "On any given Sunday a last place team can knock off a leader."

The collegiate draft posed several problems for the "haves". The weaker clubs knew what type of players they needed urgently and quickly selected quarterbacks or linemen or runners or kickers to plug gaps.

Halas Guessed Wrong

But some of the big clubs, including the Bears, guessed wrong on their future needs, as Owner-Coach George Halas has admitted. George figured his defensive line would hold up longer than it did and he has spent several seasons trying to climb back to the top. He hadn't drafted enough defenders.

The donnybrook in the Western Division this year is being achieved principally at the expense of the two-time champion Baltimore Colts.

The Colts are losing the type of game they used to win. Pass defenders are taking unusual liberties by intercepting the shots by quarterback Johnny Unitas more frequently than ever.

Thus, to gain the final round without playing off a tie, the Colts will have to lick both Los Angeles and San Francisco in California the next two weeks. Earlier, they beat the Rams but lost to the Forty Niners.

Green Bay could get in by beating the same California pair on the Coast and San Francisco would make it outright by dropping Green Bay and Baltimore, both at home.

The Bears (5-4-1) and Detroit (5-5) still aren't mathematically eliminated. They could get in for a tie if the three leaders stumble in the right—or wrong—direction.

But the way things are going, the pros may not have their title game out of the way until next year, Jan. 8 at Philadelphia.

Brooks Rides Four Winners

Ups Total To 28 At Pimlico Meet

BALTIMORE, Md. Dec. 8 (AP) —Steve Brooks, 40-year-old reinsman from McCook, Nebraska, completely overshadowed rival jockeys at Pimlico today when he rode four winners.

The Maryland Jockey Club's leading rider, Brooks started his big day in the first race when he won with Miltie's Miss for a $5.40 payoff. He came back with Harwood at $3.40 in the third race, Midpassage at $7.40 in the fourth race and then took the seventh event with Oildorado, who returned $8.00 win mutuel.

The four wins gave Brooks a total of 28 victories for the twenty-two-day-old meeting and he has practically outdistanced rivals. Bobby Corle is currently in runner-up position in the local saddle contest with sixteen wins.

While four days of the 28-day meeting still remain, Brooks plans to leave for Florida on Saturday after riding Beau Diable in the $20,000-added Pimlico Cup at a mile and a sixteenth.

Howard Dyer Voted Player Of The Year

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI)—Quarterback Howard Dyer, the best passer in the history of Virginia Military Institute, Thursday was named Southern Conference football player of the year.

Dyer, Greenville, Miss., was the choice on all but one person in a poll of 53 members of the conference sportswriters association. The other vote went to Richmond halfback Earl Stoudt.

With the honor goes the Roy M. Hawley Memorial Trophy, named in memory of the former West Virginia University athletic director who died in 1954.

The Sports Patrol

By STEVE SNIDER

NEW YORK (UPI)—The late Bert Bell had a dream 25 years ago about a National Football League race like this one.

The Philadelphia Eagles have clinched one berth in the league's championship playoff but 27 possibilities for ties exist in the other conference and nothing would have pleased Bert better—except 27 possibilities in both divisions of the league.

As things stand now (I think), Baltimore, Detroit, Green Bay and San Francisco can wind up in a Western Division tie with 7-5 records. Or Baltimore, Chicago, Green Bay and San Francisco can wind up in a four-way tie at 6-4-2.

There are four different combinations for three-way ties at 7-5 and three combinations for three-way ties at 7-4-1.

Could Win Outright

Of course, there's also a mild chance that Baltimore, Green Bay or San Francisco can win the title outright by sweeping their final two games.

When Bell was operating the last place Eagles back in 1935, long before he became the league's visionary commissioner, he came up with an idea to level off competition in the league between the "haves" and "have nots."

Bert proposed the first collegiate draft which enabled the worst teams in the league to pick the best of the college crop for the next year.

In theory, like handicapping horses, all pro clubs would come down to the wire in a dead heat.

As in racing, it's only theory but over the years the league actually has levelled off to a great extent until, after he became commissioner, Bell could say without fear of contradiction, "On any given Sunday a last place team can knock off a leader."

The collegiate draft posed several problems for the "haves". The weaker clubs knew what type of players they needed urgently and quickly selected quarterbacks or linemen or runners or kickers to plug gaps.

Halas Guessed Wrong

But some of the big clubs, including the Bears, guessed wrong on their future needs, as Owner-Coach George Halas has admitted. George figured his defensive line would hold up longer than it did and he has spent several seasons trying to climb back to the top. He hadn't drafted enough defenders.

The donnybrook in the Western Division this year is being achieved principally at the expense of the two-time champion Baltimore Colts.

The Colts are losing the type of game they used to win. Pass defenders are taking unusual liberties by intercepting the shots by quarterback Johnny Unitas more frequently than ever.

Thus, to gain the final round without playing off a tie, the Colts will have to lick both Los Angeles and San Francisco in California the next two weeks. Earlier, they beat the Rams but lost to the Forty Niners.

Green Bay could get in by beating the same California pair on the Coast and San Francisco would make it outright by dropping Green Bay and Baltimore, both at home.

The Bears (5-4-1) and Detroit (5-5) still aren't mathematically eliminated. They could get in for a tie if the three leaders stumble in the right—or wrong—direction.

But the way things are going, the pros may not have their title game out of the way until next year, Jan. 8 at Philadelphia.

Market Closes Irregular After Late Mild Recovery

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market started out cautiously Thursday, picked up as if it were going places around mid-morning and then proceeded to drift off until a mild recovery set in near the close.

The Dow-Jones industrial average settled for a minor gain mostly due to International Paper, Swift, and Anaconda all of which rose well over a point. The big cyclical stocks cooled off considerably from Wednesday's strong upsurge while the best performing groups this time included the airlines, meat packers, business machines and a few electronics.

The market was a broad one, amounting to 1,257 issues traded, including 548 gainers and 453 losers. A total of 256 did not change. New highs more than tripled new lows by 38 to 12. Volume, the heaviest by far in the morning, trailed off along with the afternoon prices to total 3,540,000 shares against 3,660,000 the day before.

Brokers who reached for reasons for the recent rally figured that tax selling had levelled off and the accumulated funds were being reinvested rather quickly. Nothing in the business news could account for the upswing.

The business equipment stocks received a large play with IBM vaulting a wide 16½ points and Olivetti-controlled Underwood up 2⅛. The recommended meat-packers scored in Swift and Armour while all the airline stocks were up in the wake of Wednesday's announcement of the TWA financing. The latter issue rolled up ⅞ and American a point.

Market Closes Irregular After Late Mild Recovery

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market started out cautiously Thursday, picked up as if it were going places around mid-morning and then proceeded to drift off until a mild recovery set in near the close.

The Dow-Jones industrial average settled for a minor gain mostly due to International Paper, Swift, and Anaconda all of which rose well over a point. The big cyclical stocks cooled off considerably from Wednesday's strong upsurge while the best performing groups this time included the airlines, meat packers, business machines and a few electronics.

The market was a broad one, amounting to 1,257 issues traded, including 548 gainers and 453 losers. A total of 256 did not change. New highs more than tripled new lows by 38 to 12. Volume, the heaviest by far in the morning, trailed off along with the afternoon prices to total 3,540,000 shares against 3,660,000 the day before.

Brokers who reached for reasons for the recent rally figured that tax selling had levelled off and the accumulated funds were being reinvested rather quickly. Nothing in the business news could account for the upswing.

The business equipment stocks received a large play with IBM vaulting a wide 16½ points and Olivetti-controlled Underwood up 2⅛. The recommended meat-packers scored in Swift and Armour while all the airline stocks were up in the wake of Wednesday's announcement of the TWA financing. The latter issue rolled up ⅞ and American a point.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♠	Pass	2NT	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

The deliberate sacrifice of an ace may occasionally result in a net gain by returning two tricks for the one that was given up. Today's hand records such a gambit.

The bidding was routine with the exception of South's initial call. Holding 17 high card points with even distribution, our own preference would have been for a bid of one no trump.

West opened the jack of clubs. With the appearance of the singleton in dummy, many players would have rushed in to cash the ace, but East engaged in a bit of calculation. Declarer's refusal to quit, after a single raise, marks him to a certainty with the ace of hearts as the only possible stopper in that suit. He is known to have only one trick in spades, and allowing him one of the high diamonds, it is almost a certainty that he has the king and queen of clubs. Theoretically, declarer could have three clubs to the queen and two high diamonds, but such holding is unlikely, for that would give West the K-J-10 of clubs, in which case he would probably have chosen some other suit to lead up to the original no trump bidder.

If East takes the ace of clubs, two of dummy's losing hearts will be discarded. So East sacrificed his ace of clubs and played to pick up two diamond tricks and two hearts. Declarer won and ruffed a club in dummy, re-entered his hand with a trump, and ruffed the remaining club. The last trump was drawn, followed by the ace and another heart. East won and led the eight of diamonds (it was important not to cash the high heart), declarer played small and the nine forced the queen. The defense could not be prevented from winning two diamond tricks.

Note that, if East had cashed his second high heart before returning the diamond, declarer could win the hand by going up with the king of diamonds. This would leave West in a helpless position for, after winning with the ace, he would have no safe return.

Britain Cuts Rate

LONDON (UPI) — Britain cut its bank rate to 5 per cent Thursday in a support-the-dollar gesture to help brake the flow of "hot money" from the United States. The old rate was 5½ per cent.

"Hot money' is used to describe funds sent to Britain from the United States to draw high interest rates here where the official rate is still higher than those of other leading European centers.

Kansas Is Stripped Of Big Eight Title

Bert Coan Declared Ineligible; Missouri Declared Champion

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Big Eight Conference Thursday declared Kansas halfback Bert Coan ineligible and stripped the Jayhawks of their first conference football championship in 30 years.

Action by the Big Eight Conference faculty committee concurred with a similar decision by the National Collegiate Athletic Association last October which placed Kansas on probation for one year.

Missouri Is Champ

Kansas was forced to forfeit all games in which Coan played since the NCAA probation on Oct. 26. Forfeitures were awarded Colorado and Missouri, giving Missouri the Big Eight championship, Colorado second place, and dumping Kansas to third.

"It was voted that in the case of Bert Coan of the University of Kansas that Kansas be held in violation of conference rules which prohibit a member of an institution from excessive entertainment of any prospective student-athlete on the campus or elsewhere," Big Eight Commissioner Reaves Peters said.

"Kansas also was found guilty of violating a conference rule in the case of Coan which prohibits off-campus trips for prospective students by a member school, its alumni, or by any other teams," he said.

Coan was accused of accompanying Houston oilman Bud Adams to Chicago for the All-Star football game a year ago. Adams is a graduate of the University of Kansas and a former Jayhawk football player.

Transferred From TCU

At the time of the trip to Chicago, Coan was enrolled at Texas Christian University. He transferred to Kansas and was the Jayhawks' leading ground-gainer this year as a sophomore.

Coan was declared ineligible for a year, from Oct. 26, 1960, until Oct. 25, 1961. He will be able to play the last half of next year's schedule—against Oklahoma State, Nebraska, Kansas State, California and Missouri.

The ineligibility ruling applies only to Coan's participation in football.

22 Deer Bagged On Fifth Day; Total Is 663

Twenty-two deer were reported killed yesterday in Allegany county on the fifth day of the seven-day season which draws to a close on Saturday.

The five-day total soared to 663.

Eight of the 22 whitetails slain yesterday were credited to gunners of the Flintstone area.

Thursday's total of 22 was the low since the season opened last Saturday.

Eight deer were checked at Shipway's Inn, Green Ridge; six at the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police; five at Hess's Service Station, Oldtown, and one at the Westernport Police Station. Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, reported that two deer slain in Allegany county were checked at Washington county stations.

Chief Game Warden George B. Shields reported from Annapolis that the kill for the first four days of the season was 3,637. The statewide record of 4,596 was established in 1958.

Garrett county's kill through Wednesday was 652. That total included 63 bagged on the fourth day of the season.

Hampshire County Group Requests Land From State Board

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The State Board of Education took action dealing with two colleges and heard a citizens-group from Hampshire County Thursday before concluding a two - day meeting.

The board approved a request by Shepherd College to start preliminary work toward construction of a student union building, giving the college the go - ahead on an application for a $250,000 loan from the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency (FHHFA).

The board also sold $1,648,000 worth of bonds to FHHFA, the only bidder, for money to finance construction of new student housing at Concord College. The agency purchased the bonds at an interest rate of 2.78 per cent.

Before an adjourning until Jan. 27, the board heard a citizens request that it turn over to a local government agency some 30 acres of unused land at the Romney Deaf and Blind School for industrial development.

The board took no action on the request, asking the group to determine if the community had some property to trade for the Romney land.

The National Hockey League win was only the third in the last 14 games for the Bruins, who climbed out of the cellar over the idle New York Rangers.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣

The deliberate sacrifice of an ace may occasionally result in a net gain by returning two tricks for the one that was given up. Today's hand records such a gambit.

The bidding was routine with the exception of South's initial call. Holding 17 high card points with even distribution, our own preference would have been for a bid of one no trump.

West opened the jack of clubs. With the appearance of the singleton in dummy, many players would have rushed in to cash the ace, but East engaged in a bit of calculation. Declarer's refusal to quit, after a single raise, marks him to a certainty with the ace of hearts as the only possible stopper in that suit. He is known to have only one trick in spades, and allowing him one of the high diamonds, it is almost a certainty that he has the king and queen of clubs. Theoretically, declarer could have three clubs to the queen and two high diamonds, but such holding is unlikely, for that would give West the K-J-10 of clubs, in which case he would probably have chosen some other suit to lead up to the original no trump bidder.

If East takes the ace of clubs, two of dummy's losing hearts will be discarded. So East sacrificed his ace of clubs and played to pick up two diamond tricks and two hearts. Declarer won and ruffed a club in dummy, re-entered his hand with a trump, and ruffed the remaining club. The last trump was drawn, followed by the ace and another heart. East won and led the eight of diamonds (it was important not to cash the high heart), declarer played small and the nine forced the queen. The defense could not be prevented from winning two diamond tricks.

Note that, if East had cashed his second high heart before returning the diamond, declarer could win the hand by going up with the king of diamonds. This would leave West in a helpless position for, after winning with the ace, he would have no safe return.

Britain Cuts Rate

LONDON (UPI) — Britain cut its bank rate to 5 per cent Thursday in a support-the-dollar gesture to help brake the flow of "hot money" from the United States. The old rate was 5½ per cent.

"Hot money' is used to describe funds sent to Britain from the United States to draw high interest rates here where the official rate is still higher than those of other leading European centers.

Kansas Is Stripped Of Big Eight Title

Bert Coan Declared Ineligible; Missouri Declared Champion

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Big Eight Conference Thursday declared Kansas halfback Bert Coan ineligible and stripped the Jayhawks of their first conference football championship in 30 years.

Action by the Big Eight Conference faculty committee concurred with a similar decision by the National Collegiate Athletic Association last October which placed Kansas on probation for one year.

Missouri Is Champ

Kansas was forced to forfeit all games in which Coan played since the NCAA probation on Oct. 26. Forfeitures were awarded Colorado and Missouri, giving Missouri the Big Eight championship, Colorado second place, and dumping Kansas to third.

"It was voted that in the case of Bert Coan of the University of Kansas that Kansas be held in violation of conference rules which prohibit a member of an institution from excessive entertainment of any prospective student-athlete on the campus or elsewhere," Big Eight Commissioner Reaves Peters said.

"Kansas also was found guilty of violating a conference rule in the case of Coan which prohibits off-campus trips for prospective students by a member school, its alumni, or by any other teams," he said.

Coan was accused of accompanying Houston oilman Bud Adams to Chicago for the All-Star football game a year ago. Adams is a graduate of the University of Kansas and a former Jayhawk football player.

Transferred From TCU

At the time of the trip to Chicago, Coan was enrolled at Texas Christian University. He transferred to Kansas and was the Jayhawks' leading ground-gainer this year as a sophomore.

Coan was declared ineligible for a year, from Oct. 26, 1960, until Oct. 25, 1961. He will be able to play the last half of next year's schedule—against Oklahoma State, Nebraska, Kansas State, California and Missouri.

The ineligibility ruling applies only to Coan's participation in football.

22 Deer Bagged On Fifth Day; Total Is 663

Twenty-two deer were reported killed yesterday in Allegany county on the fifth day of the seven-day season which draws to a close on Saturday.

The five-day total soared to 663.

Eight of the 22 whitetails slain yesterday were credited to gunners of the Flintstone area.

Thursday's total of 22 was the low since the season opened last Saturday.

Eight deer were checked at Shipway's Inn, Green Ridge; six at the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police; five at Hess's Service Station, Oldtown, and one at the Westernport Police Station. Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, reported that two deer slain in Allegany county were checked at Washington county stations.

Chief Game Warden George B. Shields reported from Annapolis that the kill for the first four days of the season was 3,637. The statewide record of 4,596 was established in 1958.

Garrett county's kill through Wednesday was 652. That total included 63 bagged on the fourth day of the season.

Hampshire County Group Requests Land From State Board

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The State Board of Education took action dealing with two colleges and heard a citizens-group from Hampshire County Thursday before concluding a two - day meeting.

The board approved a request by Shepherd College to start preliminary work toward construction of a student union building, giving the college the go - ahead on an application for a $250,000 loan from the Federal Housing and Home Finance Agency (FHHFA).

The board also sold $1,648,000 worth of bonds to FHHFA, the only bidder, for money to finance construction of new student housing at Concord College. The agency purchased the bonds at an interest rate of 2.78 per cent.

Before an adjourning until Jan. 27, the board heard a citizens request that it turn over to a local government agency some 30 acres of unused land at the Romney Deaf and Blind School for industrial development.

The board took no action on the request, asking the group to determine if the community had some property to trade for the Romney land.

Garrett Gets Inch Of Snow; Roads Slippery

Crews Of SRC Are Called Out

Garrett County was covered with about an inch of snow late yesterday, and U. S. Route 40 west of Frostburg was described as snow-covered and slippery.

Crews of the State Roads Commission were called out about 7 p.m. to cope with the hazardous driving conditions at the western end of Allegany County and in Garrett County.

A SRC spokesman said that five trucks manned by 14 employes went into action early last night and were cindering the highway.

Streets were reported slippery in some sections of Frostburg.

The temperature dropped to the 21 degree mark by 9 p.m. yesterday in Garrett County, said Ralph Weber, veteran weather observer in that county.

He said it was "right stormy and windy" yesterday, and about an inch had covered the county area. He said it snowed rather hard during the day, but it was perfectly dry later in the evening.

State Police said Martin Mountain east of Cumberland was noticeably slippery, although other sections of the highway were in good condition.

Cumberland had some snow flurries and by 9 p.m. the mercury had dropped to 27 degrees, according to Robert R. Golden, weather observer, who said the high reading for the day was 33 degrees.

Today's forecast calls for mostly sunny and a little colder, and a bit warmer tomorrow. Snow flurries are forecast for Garrett County this morning.

Toy Collection Is Ready

Santa Claus will need a whole herd of reindeer to deliver these toys stored in the toy workshop of the Associated Charities at 65 North Centre Street. Admiring the collection, described as the biggest ever, is Mrs. Kathryn Lashley, a member of the office staff of the CUF agency. Friends of the Associated Charities are being urged to inspect the collection this week.

Error Admitted In Advertising River Compact

'Sincere Mistake,' Finan Testifies

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Maryland's secretary of state admitted Thursday his office erred in the advertising of a new Potomac River Compact with Virginia before the Nov. 8 election.

"There was a misinterpretation of the law," Secretary Thomas B. Finan said. "It was a sincere mistake, not deliberate or intentional."

Finan testified for more than an hour in a room at the State House, answering questions from attorney Hyman Pressman who is challenging the legality of the new treaty with Virginia.

Pressman contends the ratification of the pact by Maryland voters should be declared null and void because it was advertised only in the Baltimore Sun. State law requires it be advertised in all Baltimore newspapers and in at least two papers in every Maryland county.

Defends Tawes

Pressman's suit also challenges the constitutionality of the compact, which would place administration of the Maryland - owned Potomac River's fishery under a bi-state agency.

The State is expected to contend, when the issue comes to a court hearing, that there was "substantial compliance" with the spirit of the law.

Finan, while admitting that his office erred in not publishing the text of the compact in other papers than the Sun, said he felt Gov. Tawes was justified in proclaiming that there had been a "free and full" expression by Maryland voters on the case.

Pressman asked if the governor had any other grounds than the favorable vote on the compact for making such a statement.

Finan replied there had been widespread publicity given the matter in newspapers in every county of the state and said some of the weekly papers even had front-page editorials on it. He said the Sun advertisement went into every county of the state.

The secretary noted Pressman himself had gone on television in Baltimore to speak against the compact before the election. Pressman represents watermen associations who petitioned the issue onto the ballot after the Maryland legislature had ratified the compact.

The compact was on the ballot along with 15 constitutional amendments, which were advertised in accordance with the law.

When Pressman asked about this procedure, Finan said the mistake came in treating the compact differently from the amendments. He said there were a number of laws governing the publication of such questions and that the deputy secretary of state mistakenly followed the format from a previous election in advertising the compact. He said the deputy, Chester Tucker, was not aware of a revision in the election laws in 1957 which required more widespread advertising.

To Seek Hearing

Finan said he approved the forms that were drawn up. He told Pressman the mistake was not discovered by his office "until after you called it to the attention of the press" following the election.

He said funds were not an issue in failure to advertise properly.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Joseph Kaufman served as legal counsel for Finan at the hearing.

Kaufman indicated he will seek a hearing in Baltimore Circuit Court on Pressman's suit late next week. Pressman said he thought it might be after Christmas before the case comes to trial.

The attorney plans to submit a list of written questions to Gov. Tawes next Monday in relation to the advertisement and proclamation of the compact. Pressman had sought to have the governor appear personally at his Baltimore office for a deposition in the case, similar to Finan's, but the court ruled Tawes would not be required to do this.

MANAGER—J. Thomas Moore of Cumberland has been named a divisional manager of Waddell and Reed, Inc., national distributor of the United Funds, Inc. group of mutual funds. Mr. Moore studied business administration at West Virginia University and worked for Dennison & Sons bank lithographers before joining Waddell and Reed. He will have his headquarters in Cumberland.

Jury Begins Murder Case Deliberations

Zirk Denies Killing Virginia Salesman

A Hardy County petit jury will resume deliberations this morning in a murder case which opened in Moorefield Tuesday.

Attorneys in the case involving Wilson C. Zirk, 45, of Old Fields, Hardy County, completed their summations yesterday at 5 p. m., when the case was given to the jury by Circuit Court Judge H. Gus Muntzing.

Court officials checked with the jury at 5:30 p. m. and told them to go home for the night and report at 9 a. m. today after no decision had been reached at 6 p. m. after an hour of deliberations.

Zirk was indicted August 2 on a charge of murdering Eldridge Lee Ritter, a Stephens City, Va., salesman, on July 14.

Cites Jury's Duty

Lewis Moomau, prosecuting attorney of Hardy County, told jurors that if they did not bring in a verdict of guilty against Zirk and had any idea of anyone else's doing the crime, it was their duty to report who that was.

Senator Ralph J. Bean, defense attorney, said the state had no evidence against Zirk.

John Hamilton, the other defense attorney, accused the state of needing a whipping boy and said that if authorities had got busy they could have solved the case.

Zirk took the stand yesterday to deny he had killed the Stephen's City salesman.

Zirk testified that on July 12 he and John Rexrode, operator of a welding shop in Moorefield had gone to the Lost River State Park area and "got on a drunk." After they ran out of whisky they came back into town to the welding shop and continued drinking.

Had Argument

Zirk said he remembers in a somewhat "foggy" way the incidents from 8 p. m. to 11 p. m. on July 13. It was during this period that Eldridge Lee Ritter, 33, came into the shop and they had an argument. Ritter struck him, Zirk testified. Ritter's body was found in his car about 4:30 a. m. (Standard Time) July 14 about half a mile from the shop. His arm had been gashed by glass from one of the windows and he had bled to death.

City Collects 79 Per Cent Of 1960-61 Levy

Spending Lags One Point Under Par

Finances of the City of Cumberland appeared to be in good shape as the fifth month of the fiscal year ended November 30.

With seven months to go, the city has collected 79.25 of its total levy and 90.5 per cent of its tax levy and spending, at 42.85 per cent, was about one point below par.

A report on the Condition of the Levy, prepared yesterday by City Auditor Arthur R. Gibson, shows that $1,506,119.01 had been collected toward the $1,899,930 levy, leaving only $393,810.99 to be collected during the next seven months.

Levy In Good Shape

The 1960-61 tax levy was in excellent shape, as the $1,128,363.38 collected represents 90.5 per cent of the $1,247,000 tax levy. This leaves only $118,636.62 to come in, and a considerable part represents personal property of corporations, which cannot be billed until assessments are certified by the State Tax Commission.

Most other sources of income appeared to be coming in on schedule. The exception is the city's share of state racing income, for which $44,000 was levied.

Mr. Gibson said he has advised the state has turned the money over to Allegany County, but that the county cannot distribute the funds until population figures for political subdivisions are certified.

The report shows that the various departments of the city spent $712,031.92, or 42.85 per cent of the $1,661,610 appropriated for operating expenses.

One Account In Red

Only one account was in the red, and it is expected to return to the black column before the half-year report is issued.

Overdrawn at $3,005.03 was the $56,400 Street and Alley Paving account. The fund is actually solvent and the overage is a temporary situation, Mr. Gibson said.

Mr. Gibson said the account will have funds to its credit as soon as the City Engineering Department makes charges against property owners for several recent construction projects, including the paving of Pearre and Forster avenues and work on Frederick and Williams streets.

Paid in full was the $10,000 contribution of the city toward the Allegany County Library.

The Condition of the Levy reports are prepared each month by Mr. Gibson to give department heads a running account of their appropriations.

Other members of the local delegation will be Lana Waite, Louella Kneisly, Donna Drummond, Judith Whisner, Kay Ann Green, Roberta Love, Judy Nee, Jean Hansrote, Judy Giles, Steve Kornblatt, Ron Bird, Hugh Bishop, Bill Cowherd, Tom Lowery, Richard Tosh, Kristen Johnson, Debbie Boden, Carole Kemp, Carol Carpenter, Tim Barnes, Charlynne Hyde, Linda Northcraft, Jackie Bland, Johanna Petenbrink, Don Beynon and Yvonne Stutzman.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss the most pressing social, moral and religious problems facing youth. Cumberland delegates will live in selected homes for the weekend and will be provided with meals and entertainment.

The schedule for the conference today includes dinner at 6 p. m. and discussion groups at 7:30 p. m. Tomorrow discussion groups will start at 9 a. m. and luncheon will be served at 12:15 p. m. Discussion groups will continue after lunch and a recreation period will be held from 3 to 6 p. m.

The conference recreation program includes a meeting with Gus Triandos, captain and catcher for the Baltimore Orioles baseball team; visits to Friendship Airport, Museum of Art, Fort McHenry and the Maryland Academy of Sciences, plus study groups at The Johns Hopkins University, Goucher College and Towson State Teachers College.

The conference dinner will be held Saturday at 6:30 p. m., followed by entertainment, a talent show and dancing.

Bus Service To Paw Paw Is Planned

The GTR Bus Lines here is extending its service to Paw Paw, W. Va., beginning Saturday.

Permission to extend the route has been obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to Lawrence Roderick, who is a partner with Clyde Turner in the operation of the bus line which has been operating between Cumberland and Oldtown for seven years.

Two round trips daily to Paw Paw have been scheduled, beginning Saturday.

Buses will leave Murphy's on Baltimore Street here at 9 a. m. and 5:15 p. m.

Buses based at Kessler's Grill, the Paw Paw terminal, will leave there at 10:05 a. m. and at 6:10 p. m. for 60-minute runs to Cumberland.

The route is being extended, the partners said, because of the need for transportation in the West Virginia community.

The additional service is scheduled to begin Saturday so people along the route will have a chance to come here for their Christmas shopping.

The ICC permission for the interstate route also gives the GTR firm the rights to operate interstate charter service.

The bus line also operates eight round trips a day between Oldtown and Cumberland, including stops at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant.

Rights to the route were purchased seven years ago from the former Emory Motor Coach Company. The firm operates two large and one small bus.

Girl Is Injured As Cars Crash On Route 40

Miss Sheila Moyer, 19, of 558 National Highway, was hospitalized here yesterday with injuries sustained in a two-car accident on U.S. Route 40 just west of the city limits.

Attaches at Sacred Heart Hospital said the young woman is in "good" condition. She was reported to have sustained an abrasion on her forehead and possible injuries.

The accident occurred at 11:55 a.m. yesterday about two-tenths of a mile west of the city limits, said Trooper R. J. Graham, investigating officer.

The trooper said Miss Moyer was a passenger in a car operated west on the highway by Merrill August Brooks, 71, of 558 National Highway.

A station wagon operated by Vera Crawford Dickerson, 45, of 4 Harold Street, LaVale, pulled out from a service station and ran into the side of the Brooks car, he added.

The trooper said the probable cause of the accident was failure to grant the right of way by the station wagon driver. The other two persons apparently were not hurt, police said.

Educator Sees No Change In Election Setup

Reasons For Views Outlined To Kiwanis

Dr. Elbert M. Byrd Jr., an assistant professor at the University of Maryland, told members of the Cumberland Kiwanis Club yesterday at Central YMCA that he personally has grave doubts that the United States Constitution ever will be amended to abolish the electoral college system of electing the President of the United States.

Dr. Byrd, who teaches in the Government and Politics Department at College Park, explained that the process of amending the U.S. Constitution virtually assures that the smaller states in population will block any move to abolish the electoral college.

The professor reminded the Kiwanians that it takes ratification by three-fourths of the states before an amendment to the Constitution becomes effective.

To illustrate his point, Dr. Byrd compared the relative importance of the vote in the states of New York and Nevada, which are at opposite extremes in population New York, with about 15 million inhabitants, has 45 electoral votes. Nevada, with only 150,000 residents, is entitled to the minimum of three, one for each Senator and one for the Congressman who serves the entire state. That means that Nevada, with only about one per cent as many people as New York, has one-fifteenth as much strength in the electoral college.

It is unlikely that the voters of Nevada and some of the other less populated states are going to favor lessening their influence in the election of the President of the United States. Negative votes by any 13 of the 50 states would doom the amendment, Dr. Byrd said.

The University of Maryland professor told his audience that the Federal Constitution is a fundamental guide to the organization of the government and not a guide as to substance of legislation. During the years it has been subject to widely varying interpretations, not only from the judicial branch of the government but from Congress and the President.

President Andrew Jackson once said he swore to uphold the U.S. Constitution "as he saw it," not as his predecessors saw it.

Plaintiff Gets $8,120 Verdict In Lawsuit

Wife Suffered Fatal Fall

An Allegany County Circuit Court petit jury yesterday awarded a total of $8,120 to the plaintiff in a damage suit involving a 72-year-old Summit woman who fell in the A&P Store in Frostburg and died the following week in Miners Hospital.

Mrs. Lulu M. Henry, wife of Raymond E. Henry, fell in the store on November 14, 1959 and died at the hospital on November 21.

The damage suit heard yesterday consisted of two cases:

The State of Maryland to the use of Raymond E. Henry vs. The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company Inc.; and Raymond E. Henry, administrator of the estate of Lulu M. Henry vs. the tea company.

In the first case the plaintiff sought $25,000; and in the second case, $15,000 for medical bills, hospital expense and funeral arrangements.

The jury which included two women heard testimony during the day and began deliberating shortly after 4 p.m. They returned to the court room about 5:30 p.m. with the verdict favoring the plaintiff.

They awarded the plaintiff $7,000 in the first case and $1,120 in the second case.

Among those testifying yesterday were Dr. W. O. McLane, Frostburg physician who examined Mrs. Henry at the hospital; Mrs. Helen McAteer and Mary LaPorta, who accompanied Mrs. Henry to the store the day she fell.

Mrs. Henry sustained a compound fracture of the upper right arm when she reportedly fell over a box in one of the aisles of the store.

C. William Gilchrist and W. Earle Cobey yesterday represented the plaintiff. The attorneys for the defendant were William C. Walsh and William Walsh.

Hafer Denies Saying Reds In Hagerstown

John J. Hafer, local undertaker, denied yesterday that he said in a speech Tuesday night in Hagerstown that the Washington County city has about 150 Communists.

An Associated Press dispatch from Hagerstown Wednesday night quoted Lt. Grayson Wigfield of the Hagerstown police as taking issue with statements in a speech by Mr. Hafer before the Washington County Farm Bureau.

Mr. Hafer said yesterday he has no knowledge that Hagerstown has any Communists. He said he merely was trying to make a point about how Communists operate when he said a local group supplied with outside leaders could take over a community in time of revolution.

He said he told the 175 persons attending the meeting that most communities have at least some Communists.

Magistrates Will Meet In Annapolis

Trial magistrates of Maryland will attend a meeting on Wednesday, December 14 at noon in Carvel Hall Hotel, Annapolis, upon an invitation from Gov. J. Millard Tawes.

Each magistrate has received a letter from Lloyd L. Simpkins, executive assistant to the governor, calling the meeting.

The purpose is to get instructional information on Maryland's point system for motor vehicle law violators.

At the 1959 session of the General Assembly, legislation was passed and signed into law, setting up a point system for Maryland motorists, which is to become effective January 1, 1961.

The governor noted that the point system, new in this state, is part of his administration policy to promote a greater degree of safety on Maryland highways.

It is necessary that the magistrates understand, Mr. Simpkins writes, the full purpose, operation, procedure and policies pertaining to the point system.

A representative of the Department of Motor Vehicles, which is the state agency charged with the responsibility of carrying out the point system, will explain and discuss the entire operation.

A period will be devoted to questions and answers and a general discussion.

Magistrates here and throughout the county will attend and Trial Magistrate Court here and Frostburg will be open, but no trials will be held.

Mr. Fleming said the SRC official promised to check the plan and to give his recommendations by Monday.

He said the city does not anticipate any major change, as the system is similar to that used on Henderson Avenue.

Pressman's suit also challenges the constitutionality of the compact, which would place administration of the Maryland - owned Potomac River's fishery under a bi-state agency.

The State is expected to contend, when the issue comes to a court hearing, that there was "substantial compliance" with the spirit of the law.

Finan, while admitting that his office erred in not publishing the text of the compact in other papers than the Sun, said he felt Gov. Tawes was justified in proclaiming that there had been a "free and full" expression by Maryland voters on the case.

Pressman asked if the governor had any other grounds than the favorable vote on the compact for making such a statement.

Finan replied there had been widespread publicity given the matter in newspapers in every county of the state and said some of the weekly papers even had front-page editorials on it. He said the Sun advertisement went into every county of the state.

The secretary noted Pressman himself had gone on television in Baltimore to speak against the compact before the election. Pressman represents watermen associations who petitioned the issue onto the ballot after the Maryland legislature had ratified the compact.

The compact was on the ballot along with 15 constitutional amendments, which were advertised in accordance with the law.

When Pressman asked about this procedure, Finan said the mistake came in treating the compact differently from the amendments. He said there were a number of laws governing the publication of such questions and that the deputy secretary of state mistakenly followed the format from a previous election in advertising the compact. He said the deputy, Chester Tucker, was not aware of a revision in the election laws in 1957 which required more widespread advertising.

To Seek Hearing

Finan said he approved the forms that were drawn up. He told Pressman the mistake was not discovered by his office "until after you called it to the attention of the press" following the election.

He said funds were not an issue in failure to advertise properly.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Joseph Kaufman served as legal counsel for Finan at the hearing.

Kaufman indicated he will seek a hearing in Baltimore Circuit Court on Pressman's suit late next week. Pressman said he thought it might be after Christmas before the case comes to trial.

The attorney plans to submit a list of written questions to Gov. Tawes next Monday in relation to the advertisement and proclamation of the compact. Pressman had sought to have the governor appear personally at his Baltimore office for a deposition in the case, similar to Finan's, but the court ruled Tawes would not be required to do this.

Jury Begins Murder Case Deliberations

Zirk Denies Killing Virginia Salesman

A Hardy County petit jury will resume deliberations this morning in a murder case which opened in Moorefield Tuesday.

Attorneys in the case involving Wilson C. Zirk, 45, of Old Fields, Hardy County, completed their summations yesterday at 5 p. m., when the case was given to the jury by Circuit Court Judge H. Gus Muntzing.

Court officials checked with the jury at 5:30 p. m. and told them to go home for the night and report at 9 a. m. today after no decision had been reached at 6 p. m. after an hour of deliberations.

Zirk was indicted August 2 on a charge of murdering Eldridge Lee Ritter, a Stephens City, Va., salesman, on July 14.

Cites Jury's Duty

Lewis Moomau, prosecuting attorney of Hardy County, told jurors that if they did not bring in a verdict of guilty against Zirk and had any idea of anyone else's doing the crime, it was their duty to report who that was.

Senator Ralph J. Bean, defense attorney, said the state had no evidence against Zirk.

John Hamilton, the other defense attorney, accused the state of needing a whipping boy and said that if authorities had got busy they could have solved the case.

Zirk took the stand yesterday to deny he had killed the Stephen's City salesman.

Zirk testified that on July 12 he and John Rexrode, operator of a welding shop in Moorefield had gone to the Lost River State Park area and "got on a drunk." After they ran out of whisky they came back into town to the welding shop and continued drinking.

Had Argument

Zirk said he remembers in a somewhat "foggy" way the incidents from 8 p. m. to 11 p. m. on July 13. It was during this period that Eldridge Lee Ritter, 33, came into the shop and they had an argument. Ritter struck him, Zirk testified. Ritter's body was found in his car about 4:30 a. m. (Standard Time) July 14 about half a mile from the shop. His arm had been gashed by glass from one of the windows and he had bled to death.

City Collects 79 Per Cent Of 1960-61 Levy

Spending Lags One Point Under Par

Finances of the City of Cumberland appeared to be in good shape as the fifth month of the fiscal year ended November 30.

With seven months to go, the city has collected 79.25 of its total levy and 90.5 per cent of its tax levy and spending, at 42.85 per cent, was about one point below par.

A report on the Condition of the Levy, prepared yesterday by City Auditor Arthur B. Gibson, shows that $1,506,119.01 had been collected toward the $1,899,930 levy, leaving only $393,810.99 to be collected during the next seven months.

Levy In Good Shape

The 1960-61 tax levy was in excellent shape, as the $1,128,363.38 collected represents 90.5 per cent of the $1,247,000 tax levy. This leaves only $118,636.62 to come in, and a considerable part represents personal property of corporations, which cannot be billed until assessments are certified by the State Tax Commission.

Most other sources of income appeared to be coming in on schedule. The exception is the city's share of state racing income, for which $44,000 was levied.

Mr. Gibson said he has advised the state has turned the money over to Allegany County, but that the county cannot distribute the funds until population figures for political subdivisions are certified.

The report shows that the various departments of the city spent $712,031.92, or 42.85 per cent of the $1,661,610 appropriated for operating expenses.

One Account In Red

Only one account was in the red, and it is expected to return to the black column before the half-year report is issued.

Overdrawn at $3,005.03 was the $56,400 Street and Alley Paving account. The fund is actually solvent and the overage is a temporary situation, Mr. Gibson said.

Mr. Gibson said the account will have funds to its credit as soon as the City Engineering Department makes charges against property owners for several recent construction projects, including the paving of Pearre and Forster avenues and work on Frederick and Williams streets.

Paid in full was the $10,000 contribution of the city toward the Allegany County Library.

The Condition of the Levy reports are prepared each month by Mr. Gibson to give department heads a running account of their appropriations.

Bus Service To Paw Paw Is Planned

The GTR Bus Lines here is extending its service to Paw Paw, W. Va., beginning Saturday.

Permission to extend the route has been obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission, according to Lawrence Roderick, who is a partner with Clyde Turner in the operation of the bus line which has been operating between Cumberland and Oldtown for seven years.

Two round trips daily to Paw Paw have been scheduled, beginning Saturday.

Buses will leave Murphy's on Baltimore Street here at 9 a. m. and 5:15 p. m.

Buses based at Kessler's Grill, the Paw Paw terminal, will leave there at 10:05 a. m. and at 6:10 p. m. for 60-minute runs to Cumberland.

The route is being extended, the partners said, because of the need for transportation in the West Virginia community.

The additional service is scheduled to begin Saturday so people along the route will have a chance to come here for their Christmas shopping.

The ICC permission for the interstate route also gives the GTR firm the rights to operate interstate charter service.

The bus line also operates eight round trips a day between Oldtown and Cumberland, including stops at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant.

Rights to the route were purchased seven years ago from the former Emory Motor Coach Company. The firm operates two large and one small bus.

Educator Sees No Change In Election Setup

Reasons For Views Outlined To Kiwanis

Dr. Elbert M. Byrd Jr., an assistant professor at the University of Maryland, told members of the Cumberland Kiwanis Club yesterday at Central YMCA that he personally has grave doubts that the United States Constitution ever will be amended to abolish the electoral college system of electing the President of the United States.

Dr. Byrd, who teaches in the Government and Politics Department at College Park, explained that the process of amending the U.S. Constitution virtually assures that the smaller states in population will block any move to abolish the electoral college.

The professor reminded the Kiwanians that it takes ratification by three-fourths of the states before an amendment to the Constitution becomes effective.

To illustrate his point, Dr. Byrd compared the relative importance of the vote in the states of New York and Nevada, which are at opposite extremes in population New York, with about 15 million inhabitants, has 45 electoral votes. Nevada, with only 150,000 residents, is entitled to the minimum of three, one for each Senator and one for the Congressman who serves the entire state. That means that Nevada, with only about one per cent as many people as New York, has one-fifteenth as much strength in the electoral college.

It is unlikely that the voters of Nevada and some of the other less populated states are going to favor lessening their influence in the election of the President of the United States. Negative votes by any 13 of the 50 states would doom the amendment, Dr. Byrd said.

The University of Maryland professor told his audience that the Federal Constitution is a fundamental guide to the organization of the government and not a guide as to substance of legislation. During the years it has been subject to widely varying interpretations, not only from the judicial branch of the government but from Congress and the President.

President Andrew Jackson once said he swore to uphold the U.S. Constitution "as he saw it," not as his predecessors saw it.

Plaintiff Gets $8,120 Verdict In Lawsuit

Wife Suffered Fatal Fall

An Allegany County Circuit Court petit jury yesterday awarded a total of $8,120 to the plaintiff in a damage suit involving a 72-year-old Summit woman who fell in the A&P Store in Frostburg and died the following week in Miners Hospital.

Mrs. Lulu M. Henry, wife of Raymond E. Henry, fell in the store on November 14, 1959 and died at the hospital on November 21.

The damage suit heard yesterday consisted of two cases:

The State of Maryland to the use of Raymond E. Henry vs. The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company Inc.; and Raymond E. Henry, administrator of the estate of Lulu M. Henry vs. the tea company.

In the first case the plaintiff sought $25,000 and in the second case, $15,000 for medical bills, hospital expense and funeral arrangements.

The jury which included two women heard testimony during the day and began deliberating shortly after 4 p.m. They returned to the court room about 5:30 p.m. with the verdict favoring the plaintiff.

They awarded the plaintiff $7,000 in the first case and $1,120 in the second case.

Among those testifying yesterday were Dr. W. O. McLane, Frostburg physician who examined Mrs. Henry at the hospital; Mrs. Helen McAteer and Mary LaPorta, who accompanied Mrs. Henry to the store the day she fell.

Mrs. Henry sustained a compound fracture of the upper right arm when she reportedly fell over a box in one of the aisles of the store.

C. William Gilchrist and W. Earle Cobey yesterday represented the plaintiff. The attorneys for the defendant were William C. Walsh and William Walsh.

Hafer Denies Saying Reds In Hagerstown

John J. Hafer, local undertaker, denied yesterday that he said in a speech Tuesday night in Hagerstown that the Washington County city has about 150 Communists.

An Associated Press dispatch from Hagerstown Wednesday night quoted Lt. Grayson Wigfield of the Hagerstown police as taking issue with statements in a speech by Mr. Hafer before the Washington County Farm Bureau.

Mr. Hafer said yesterday he has no knowledge that Hagerstown has any Communists. He said he merely was trying to make a point about how Communists operate when he said a local group supplied with outside leaders could take over a community in time of revolution.

He said he told the 175 persons attending the meeting that most communities have at least some Communists.

Magistrates Will Meet In Annapolis

Trial magistrates of Maryland will attend a meeting on Wednesday, December 14 at noon in Carvel Hall Hotel, Annapolis, upon an invitation from Gov. J. Millard Tawes.

Each magistrate has received a letter from Lloyd L. Simpkins, executive assistant to the governor, calling the meeting.

The purpose is to get instructional information on Maryland's point system for motor vehicle law violators.

At the 1959 session of the General Assembly, legislation was passed and signed into law, setting up a point system for Maryland motorists, which is to become effective January 1, 1961.

The governor noted that the point system, new in this state, is part of his administration policy to promote a greater degree of safety on Maryland highways.

It is necessary that the magistrates understand, Mr. Simpkins writes, the full purpose, operation, procedure and policies pertaining to the point system.

A representative of the Department of Motor Vehicles, which is the state agency charged with the responsibility of carrying out the point system, will explain and discuss the entire operation.

A period will be devoted to questions and answers and a general discussion.

Magistrates here and throughout the county will attend and Trial Magistrate Court here and Frostburg will be open, but no trials will be held.

Girl Is Injured As Cars Crash On Route 40

Miss Sheila Moyer, 19, of 558 National Highway, was hospitalized here yesterday with injuries sustained in a two-car accident on U.S. Route 40 just west of the city limits.

Attaches at Sacred Heart Hospital said the young woman is in "good" condition. She was reported to have sustained an abrasion on her forehead and possible injuries.

The accident occurred at 11:55 a.m. yesterday about two-tenths of a mile west of the city limits, said Trooper R. J. Graham, investigating officer.

The trooper said Miss Moyer was a passenger in a car operated west on the highway by Merrill August Brooks, 71, of 558 National Highway.

A station wagon operated by Vera Crawford Dickerson, 45, of 4 Harold Street, LaVale, pulled out from a service station and ran into the side of the Brooks car, he added.
